U. S. THWARTS ANTI-BRITISH BLOC

Tells France Her Effort to Align Italy and Belgium Is Disappointing—Plan Abandoned.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
London, March 2.—The movement for a continental bloc, composed of France, Belgium and Italy, which was aimed to isolate Great Britain in Europe, has collapsed under the opposition of the United States. It was learned this afternoon from an authoritative source.

France is understood to have proposed the alliance. Belgium favored it but Italy was only lukewarm. International News Service learns that Myron T. Herrick, American ambassador to France, informally advised Premier Poincare that, in the event an anti-British bloc was formed, the United States "could not remain indifferent."

Ambassador Herrick pointed out that Great Britain alone of the Allied nations is fulfilling her obligations to the United States. An anti-British bloc, it was stated, would make it necessary for the British to spend more money for armaments, thus impairing their ability to pay the United States the war time debt.

The United States took the view that an anti-British bloc in Europe would be regarded as anti-American as well.

Premier Poincare is said to have broken off the continental bloc negotiations immediately after Ambassador Herrick had issued the warning. Premier Poincare had been making vigorous efforts to obtain the close cooperation of Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy, but the latter failed to see how Italy would be benefited by the alliance.

It is understood that M. Poincare is now trying to strengthen the old entente between France and England. Owing to France's continental policy the British have not responded as cordially to French overtures as they would under different conditions. The British are bending all their efforts towards an accord with the United States.

LARGE SAUGERTIES BARN COLLAPSED WEDNESDAY.

The roof and second story of the brick barn located on Jane street, Saugerties, next to the Finger factory building and owned by Morris M. Schoenfeld, collapsed on Wednesday evening. The cavern was due to the weight of snow resting on the roof.

Immediately after the collapse the Washington Hook and Ladder Co. was summoned and removed the dangerous portions of the wrecked building.

John Stout Wins Again When Justice Morschauer Denies Motion of Hiltbrant Dry Dock Company for Leave to Serve Supplemental Answer.

Judge Morschauer has denied the motion of C. Hiltbrant Dry Dock Company, defendant, for leave to serve a supplemental answer in the action brought by John Stout. The action was brought by John Stout, plaintiff, against the C. Hiltbrant Dry Dock Company to compel the defendant to remove a certain fence and other obstructions on a public highway at South Rondout. Judge Hasbrouck granted a temporary injunction to plaintiff in August, 1920, and the defendant appealed from Judge Hasbrouck's decision and Judge Morschauer's decision was affirmed. Later the action was tried before Judge Nichols and a judgment was rendered in favor of plaintiff. The defendant appealed from this judgment and Judge Nichols's decision was affirmed. The defendant then applied to the appellate division of the supreme court for leave to have the case reviewed by the court of appeals. The appellate division denied this application. The defendant then applied to the court of appeals for leave to have the case reviewed by that court, and that application was denied. Then defendant then made a motion before Judge Morschauer at Poughkeepsie for leave to serve a supplemental answer in the action and Judge Morschauer has denied that application.

The action was tried at the December, 1922, term of Supreme Court.

TWO ELECTROCUTED IN OHIO'S PENITENTIARY

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Columbus, O., March 2.—Charles Arnold, 65, white, and Henry White, a negro, met death in a double electrocution at the Ohio penitentiary early today. Five applications of current were necessary before the negro was pronounced dead as he had steadfastly refused to drink any water yesterday, prison officials said. Arnold went to the chair convicted of murdering and robbing Mrs. Ruth Lawrence, landlady of a Columbus rooming house, on June 24, 1922. As he sat down in the death chair, he grinned at Patrolman "Buck" Rammet, who arrested him for the murder and said:

"My God, Buck, are you here?" Arnold had a long prison record behind his last offense.

White met death for the murder of his wife in this city February 11, 1922.

OYSTER DIGGERS BECOME RICH FROM BOOTLEGGING

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Newark, N. J., March 2.—An increase in the price of oysters and clams was attributed by dealers here today to the fact that a majority of the fishermen have turned bootleggers.

POLA "MAKES UP" WITH CHARLEY

He Hastens to Her After She Announces Break and at Midnight Anxious World Is Assured All Is Well Again.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Los Angeles, Cal., March 2.—Charley Chaplin works speedily in love as well as on the screen.

Eight hours after Pola Negri had publicly announced that she had broken her engagement to the comedian, Chaplin early today was able to announce a reconciliation which the Polish screen star later confirmed.

It was just a lover's quarrel—nothing more—and now filmland's most famous romance is again sailing under fair skies and on smooth waters.

Late yesterday Miss Negri received newspapermen at the Lasky studio, where she is making pictures and in a most tragic way, announced she was breaking her engagement to Chaplin. She admitted Chaplin had not to learn the sad news, but insisted that their romance was irrevocably dead. She was sending the sad news to "Shirley" through the medium of one of their best friends.

Miss Negri passionately declared she hereafter would be wed only to her art and that the happy days at Santa Barbara and Belmont would be forgotten forever. All because—a formal statement said—she was "too poor to marry."

To reporters, she could give other reasons.

"Oh, a thousand things—plus do not ask me," she waived.

News reached Chaplin at his studio where he was in the midst of a big scene at five o'clock. At 5:10 the company had been dismissed. Charley's funny costume changed for his street clothes and he was speeding to Miss Negri's residence in his big limousine.

Then ominous silence until midnight. Shortly thereafter, Chaplin came forth smiling.

"There has been a reconciliation," he announced.

Then Chaplin admitted that it was all because of a lover's tiff. Something came up three days ago and during that long period Charley did not see Pola. Then came publication in a local paper of a jocular statement from Chaplin that he was "too poor to wed."

This was the crowning blow to the love-sad heart of the famous tragedienne.

Miss Negri confirmed the reconciliation. It was intimated that the wedding might take place soon.

NEW BRIDGE NECESSARY OVER CATSKILL CREEK.

On the main highway between Albany and New York in the village of Catskill and spanning the Catskill Creek is the town bridge, of which many complaints have been made to the state highway department.

Engineer Ames, of the highway department, made a survey of the bridge on Tuesday and found the steel uprights rusted and while taking observations under the bridge was convinced that the bridge should be replaced at the earliest date. Undoubtedly he will report this to the commissioner of highways.

MANDATORY MAIL BOX ORDER HERE

Householders Who Don't Provide Receptacles Must Go to Post Office for Mail—Business Houses Not Affected.

The post-office department is very much encouraged with the response of most of the patrons receiving mail by carrier in providing a receptacle or slot for the mail matter so that the carrier will not be delayed in depositing the letters, etc. Any sort of receptacle will do as long as it has no sharp points or edges about it. Some have even put up pasteboard boxes which formerly contained cereals. Others use the 10c and 25c metal mail boxes. Still others have had very handsome brass slots inserted in their doors.

After today, March 1, it is mandatory upon the carrier to notify all patrons to provide receptacles or slots or rail at the main post office for their mail. DOING AWAY WITH LEAKAGE

Soldering Always Important Point in the Proper Care of Electric Contacts in Radio Work.

All electric contacts should be soldered. There are plenty of reasons why this step should never be omitted. In radio work the aerial currents are always feeble. It does not do to lose any. No better leak device is known than a hackle of sharp points. Electric charges escape by this route into the surrounding air at every opportunity.

When electrons find a region set with narrowing edges and points they crowd into it, driven by their powers of mutual repulsion. Voltages become high out on narrow areas. Electrons find it easier to leap to molecules of air nearby than to stay among their kind on the point. There is a remedy that is easily applied. Bend down all projecting ends of wire and melt a large drop of solder over the whole spot. Electrons find it most difficult to get off a sphere.

Soldering provides a continuous metal contact between wires, and does away with losses by resistance, to a large extent.

Frogs for Bad Throats.

Even today many people have strange beliefs and superstitions. All sorts of quaint rites are carried out, particularly in connection with children.

Some mothers, for instance, believe in cutting their baby's hair at the waxing of the moon. This ceremony dates back for thousands of years to the days when people regarded it as a safeguard against evil.

Another silly superstition is that of giving children live frogs to suck. This is supposed to prevent and cure "thrush," or injury to the throat. Again, there are still women who think that they will improve their children's health by eating raisins and placing the stones on the baby's stomach.

Modern science is rapidly abolishing these old ideas, but they still hold their ground in certain places.

Male Penguin's Love Token.

The love-making of penguins is described by Surgeon Commander Murray Levick, a member of Captain Scott's Antarctic expedition. In the spring, he says, the hen birds scoop out a hollow in the frozen ground, sit in it and wait. When a male bird sees a hen who takes his fancy he places a pebble at her feet. This is the signal for an attack on him by the other males, but after a fight he is left in possession.

On one occasion, says Commander Levick, a member of Captain Scott's expedition was sitting down watching the birds when a male came up and placed a pebble at his feet. The bird, finding its advances ignored, inspected the strange, silent animal, nibbled at his trousers and then went away.

Fine Examples of Wood Carving.

Some interesting examples of Italian Renaissance wood carvings were brought to America in 1918 and placed in the Carnegie museum. The carvings formerly were in the collection of M. Emile Pares of Paris, a noted antiquarian. All the pieces are of a religious character and formerly were part of the decoration of a church, the name of which is unknown. There are seven panels, carved in high relief and decorated in polychrome. They depict for the most part incidents from the life of St. John, the evangelist, and were set either in the paneling of a wall or were part of the decoration of interior doors.

to extract your sky-piece from beneath the elevator after said elevator has descended above. This stunt is as it appears. All is to push the shaft a couple of feet, take hold of the right with your hand and draw your arm out of the shaft. The shaft will not interfere with the elevator. This is the only way to get out of the shaft. If you get stuck, you are likely to have tried it, the elevator on neck, and can show as outline. Just as a man before beginning to leave the shaft, you get with a stick hammer.

MOVIES AT THE NORTH POLE.

It must be a wonderful experience to push on into the Arctic regions until the northern lights are seen to the south. But Donald McMillan, Arctic explorer, who reports such a feat, gave the native Eskimos a glimpse of greater wonders to them than their flaming skies and crackling atmosphere were to him. In an uncharted tract near Haffin Land he showed the natives motion picture scenes of crowded cities, "colleges, street cars and battleships." And the Eskimos found these wonders so much more fascinating than their own dancing skies, ice floes, spouting whales, polar bears, seals, walrus and musk-oxen that they wept. Mr. McMillan relates, when he folded up his apparatus and the wondrous pictures lived before their eyes no more.

Some of them were eager to follow him to the southern land of marvels, ignorant of or regardless of the fact that others of their race have lamented the day when they yielded to the lure and adventure into the soft fair country far to the south. The Eskimos who have come down to be looked at in world's fair "villages" have not only pined for their igloo and kayak, for the drink of hot blood from the seal, for the primitive northern life in general and the continuing cold, but have usually perished from tuberculosis or the "flu" or some other white man's deadly ailment. Even those who escaped suffered keenly from nostalgia and were eager to return to their arctic home. Climatic conditions become a part of man's life and when they are exchanged too radically nature itself is apt to rebel. This is especially true in the case of primitive races accustomed to the simple life in a quiet land, far from the frets, alarms and hurry of civilization.

SUFFRAGE IN FRANCE.

The intelligence of French women has long been recognized both in and out of their country. Moreover, French women became equal partners with men in conducting the practical affairs of life, social, industrial and commercial, long before such recognition was accorded to women in other countries. For this reason the failure of woman suffrage in France—the measure being defeated by the majority of the French Senate—caused widespread surprise. One explanation coming out of France itself is that French women are more gallantly treated by their men than are the women of other nations and therefore do not feel the need of the ballot. According to an American correspondent in Paris, the majority of French women are quite satisfied with their present political status, but the same was said to be true of the majority of American women and undoubtedly there was much evidence to support the claim.

It may be taken for granted that French women will demand and receive the ballot in time, but at present it is probable that, like their men, their chief and most absorbing interest is the upbuilding of their devastated country and the forwarding of measures of defense against the waiting enemy across the Rhine. French women who have lived to see the horrors of two invasions from Germany and expect a third are no doubt listened to with due gravity by their younger sisters. It can be readily understood that at present among all classes of women in France campaigning for women suffrage is regarded as an unimportant matter compared with measures for national defense.

It is stated that fifty per cent of the government saving stamps purchases have gone into other government securities, and that heavy increases in saving deposits are shown by the Federal Reserve Board's figures, amounting to about half a billion dollars in less than a thousand separate banking institutions. A substantial gain is reported also in government postal deposits. Evidently the lessons in saving and thrift preached so eloquently during the war have borne fruit.

By going to the new "Bureau of Social Service" and paying $10, the lonely stranger in New York can secure for an evening the company of a nice girl "of excellent morals," blonde or brunette according to taste.

Pleasant for those who like it, but the cost of cab service, theater tickets and supper in addition to the initial fee is apt to incline most travelers to seek escape from loneliness at a more moderate figure in some one of New York's multitude of amusements.

The report that $250,000 was recently offered to secure the passage of a bill through congress has caused skeptical comment on the ground that any one of the many lobbies at Washington "would do all it could for much less money." Though there is point in such reasoning, it can hardly be accepted as altogether dismissing the report.

Borough Nature Club Notes

What do you want to know about Nature Subjects? Send any questions of general interest to the Nature Notes Department of this paper, enclosing self-addressed and stamped envelope for reply.

(Can You Answer These Questions?)

1. Can a plant grow in hot water?
2. Does the porcupine roll into a ball to protect itself?
3. We had a pair of goldfinches this summer in our garden, and want to keep them coming. Can we do anything special to attract them?

Answers in Tomorrow's Nature Notes.

Answers To Previous Questions.

1. What are the excrescences or tubercular growths on the roots of a wax begonia? I notice plants that have these.

Caused by some parasite that attacks the roots, but we cannot tell what one is on your house plants without seeing a specimen. The swelling is of the same general type as the gall produced on leaves or stems, due to puncture by an egg-laying parasitic insect. The tissues around the foreign substance are irritated by it. Try watering with weak nicotine solution—in a potted plant this might check the young insects that come out. Swab off the stems and leaves also—some of these insects come up from the egg and feed on the foliage.

2. Can you tell me what the following bird is, locally called Shite-poke? Is it an American bittern, Botaurus lentiginosus, or the little brown crane, Grus canadensis?

Neither. Shitepoke is the local name for the green heron, Butorides virescens, but its Latin name means "bird resembling a bittern." Also locally called "Fly-up-the-creek" and "Chalkline." Good full description in Vol. 1 of Eaton's Birds of New York, pp. 262-263. Common in tropical and temperate America as far north as Manitoba or New Brunswick. Voice shrill and less hoarse than most cranes. A daytime bird. Uses loose nest of sticks, near a creek, about 15 feet up from ground.

3. Do beavers comb their fur with their paws? I heard so. What for?

Yes, in a sense. The second digit or toe of both hind feet has a special equipment of a double claw, called a dew-claw. This is serviceable in digging out parasites from their dense fur, or removing any substance that has lodged.

W. C. T. U. WOMEN AT ALBANY CONFERENCE

The New York State W. C. T. U. held a regional conference in the Educational Building, Albany, N. Y., Tuesday, February 20, 1923.

Distinguished guests of honor were present as follows: Dr. Valeria Parker, director of social morality, National W. C. T. U.; Mrs. Laura Parks Miller, director of women in industry, National W. C. T. U.; Dr. L. L. McNease, chairman technical committee, Women's Foundation of Health; song leader, Mrs. M. M. Moffatt, formerly of Ulsterville, Ulster county.

Mrs. Ella A. Boole, state president, presided. The Hon. Frederick M. Davenport, senator from Oneida county and college professor, gave a most inspiring address. The Hon. L. C. Long spoke on "Law Making in the Legislature." Mrs. Laura Parks Miller told what could be done for women in industry and how they could help in law-enforcement. The Rev. O. R. Miller spoke on "Moving Pictures and Their Control."

At 7 o'clock a banquet was served to two hundred and fifty people in the Y. W. C. A. building, Lodge street. Mrs. Helen A. Miller was toastmaster. The speakers were: Canon Chase, Dr. C. W. Leitzell, O. R. Miller and Mrs. Ella A. Boole. An entertaining reading was given by Miss Avery. Mrs. Donald Wood delighted all with a vocal solo.

A state executive session was held in the Y. W. C. A. rooms Wednesday morning. Thirty-six counties were represented. Wednesday afternoon a large delegation of White Ribboners attended the hearing on the Mullan-Gage law. The principal argument used against the proposition to repeal the law was that it is the duty of every citizen to obey the law, to cooperate with officers in its observance, and to cooperate with executive officers in its enforcement.

KIWANIS WATCHES "HELLOS" COME IN

Shows How Local Telephone Plant Is Operated—Find It Very Complicated.

Almost all the Kiwanis club members inspected the operating department of the New York Telephone Company on Broadway on invitation of Mr. Harder, commercial manager, following the Thursday noon luncheon.

"Marvelous," said several, as they viewed the complicated apparatus, and the numerous radio fans talked heartily of using the same kind of instruments the telephone company does. Some of them cast longing eyes on the bulbs used in the telephone repeaters. Complications were almost as numerous as they used to be in an Ulster county village where The Freeman's correspondent invariably described a death as "due to complications."

The telephone company is bound to get some favorable publicity out of this account anyway, so it might be as well to say that the visitors came away with an impression that a telephone exchange is one of the most intricate and delicately balanced mechanism yet evolved, and that failures in telephone service here must be traceable to causes that cannot be humanly be guarded against. Besides the mazes of wires, batteries, coils, bulbs and other instruments, the thousands upon thousands of intricate connections through each one of which the current must function perfectly the work done by the girl operators is not the least of the "complications." They are the points of contact with the subscriber, the ones he tells things to when he feels abused or pleased, before he has time to think and whether he is a polite individual or a natural boor.

The Kiwanians were taken through in groups of four, each group conveyed by a guide. First they visited the switchboards, local and long distance and, although the guide talked to them as he would to little children, few understood further than that when a call comes in a tiny lamp lights up, the operator sticks in a plug, asks "Number, please," and then sticks a plug on the other end of that "jack" into its proper hole among the hundreds in front of her or in front of the girl next to her. There was a constant play of hands and cords along the face of the switchboard. Supervisors patrol the back of the line ready to help out if business gets too hot on any section of the board for the regular operator to handle it properly. The long distance board is operated in much the same manner, having connections to the local board, and recording time clocks on which the operators register the time the conversation lasts.

The back of the switchboard is a mass of small wires and connections, and downstairs are the connections to the underground cables and the fuses and coils that guard against lightning and power crosses which if they entered the inside system might do thousands of dollars damage in an instant.

The girls' rest quarters are spacious, daintily furnished and spotlessly clean and contain a Victrola. The girls work two hours, very steadily, and then rest for fifteen minutes. There is a locker room nearby.

The ground floor of the big addition recently completed is still fitted up as a Christmas ball room, among the finest in town. It will later be used for repeater and other equipment.

In the basement are a big internal combustion motor run by illuminating gas, which runs a direct current generator for charging batteries or providing ringing and talking current and a motor-driven generator, in regular use for the latter purpose. The battery room contains many batteries of several types, about a dozen of them being as big as barrels.

The club members upon leaving expressed their appreciation to Mr. Harder for the interesting and instructive inspection he had afforded them.

Next week Kiwanis begins an attendance contest to run for ten weeks and nothing short of personal attendance or a certificate of attendance at another club will count on the attendance records.

JONES' WHOPPER

"That fellow Jones is the worst liar I ever met."
"What now?"
"He says he took his car to the garage man and the fellow found there wasn't much the matter with it and actually fixed it—fixed it, mind you—and didn't charge him a cent for the trouble."

The Nemesis of the Aviator.
"Are you hurt?" asked the excited farmer, as he rushed up to an aviator whose plane had been wrecked in his corn field.
"No."
"Then what are you swearing about?"
"I've just discovered that I'm out of cigarettes."

His Daily Diet.
Judge—You're accused of stealing some swords and fencing fells from a pawnshop—and you'll probably tell me you did it because you were hungry.
The Accused—Yes, your honor! I'm the sword swallower at the circus!

Near Tragedy.
Voice (in darkness)—Rastus, you black rascal, get out of that chicken coop. I've got a shotgun aimed at you.
Voice From Chicken Coop—For de Lawd's sake, colonel, don't shoot! You might kill a chicken!—American Mutual Magazine.

Testing It.
"Young man," said the boss, impressively, "what you want to learn is that perseverance wins, perseverance, sticking everlastingly at it!"
"Yes, sir," said the youth. "That's what you told me the last time, and I'm here again the way you said it, asking for that raise!"

Sparing His Feelings.
"I want a word of advice."
"Well?" replied Mr. Wadleigh, grimly.
"What is the best way to approach you for a loan?"
"If you are sensitive, you had better write for it, and when you get my reply tear it up without reading it!"

TEMPORARY INCREASE
"Did you gain in weight during your hunting trip?"
"Only temporarily. I went back as soon as the doctor removed the shot."

No Fair Exchange.
When our farmers take positions, voicing a stern alarm, we hope our politicians will not have to run the farm.

The Feeling Was Mutual.
Benny—That fellow Wilkins is just crazy about you. He told me that he was starving for love.
Jenny—Yes, both of us are. He hasn't taken me out to dinner once in the last year.

On Duty.
"Who is that fellow trying to start a bawdy automobile and swearing in a manner shocking to hear?"
"Pass on and don't embarrass the poor devil. He's the president of our local 'Optimist' club."

No Trouble to Listen.
Father—Now, my son, I'm going to give you some good advice and some day you'll wish you had taken it.
Son—Fire away, dad, since from your own words you don't expect me to take it.

He Knew the Feeling.
Binks—I see where a famous scientist says that the world is coming to an end.
Jinx—Yes, that's about the way I felt after the poker game last Saturday night.

Very Different.
"Jim talks too much about himself."
"He claims that that is the way to make others talk about you."
"Yes, but they won't say the same things that you do."

Uncongenial.
Miss Gush (to popular novelist)—I suppose you just live with your characters.
Novelist—Oh, dear, no. They're rather an unpleasant lot.

Just What He Ordered.
Customer—Say, waiter, there's a potato bug in this soup!
Waiter—Well, you ordered vegetable soup, didn't you?

Various Types of Buys.
There are 40 different types of buys used at sea, each of which has a meaning of its own. That of a green color, for instance, means a wreck, while others similarly distinctive show where rocks, shoals, sandbars and deep water channels occur.

GILT-EDGED APOLOGY

The hard-boiled captain of industry to whom a friend was introducing a young man just out of college and seeking a job:
"He is a fine, modest young man," said the friend.
"Modest?" snorted the big man. "What in thunder has he ever done to become modest about?"—Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.

Deep-Seated Grudge.
"You refer to the prosperous looking person as a 'coal baron'?"
"Quite so," replied the disgruntled proprietor of a little fuel business.
"But he's not a real nobleman!"
"Certainly not. And since I've been dealing with him I've found out that he's not even one of nature's noblemen."

Insult to Injury.
Fair One—Officer, arrest this man. He has been trying to flirt with me.
Mere Man—What? Her? Why officer I wouldn't flirt with her for a million dollars.

Fair One—Now, officer, you simply must arrest this man. He has insulted me.—American Legion Weekly.

Business in Politics.
"A man can't use money in politics any more."
"I'm glad of it," said Senator Sorghum. "If things had kept on the way they once started, the candidates would have been lining up at the primaries with 'shop early' slogans."—Washington Star.

CAUSE FOR SORROW
Snake—Why so sad?
Zebra—I'm sick of looking like a jail bird, that's why.

Can't Be Done.
Your face may be your fortune, miss. But effort is misplaced. In trying to increase your wealth. By being double-faced.

Secret Diplomacy.
Her Chum—However did you make your husband give you that lovely all-season trip?
Mrs. Wyse-Guy—Don't tell a soul. I had mother write and ask when it would be convenient for her and father and my two sisters to come and make us a nice, long visit.

Another Vicious Circle.
"One by one our children leave us," said the mother sadly, as the fourth daughter started on her wedding journey.
"Yes," replied the father, a little more sadly, "and one by one they bring our sons-in-law back to us."

Front.
Some people put all the money in "front."
For instance—
Said his wife: "The parlor furniture is getting very shabby."
Said he: "Have some elaborate coverings made."

Ahead of Fawther.
"Papa, the newly engaged daughter said ardently, 'Dick and I are truly two souls with but a single thought.'"
"Well, child, don't be discouraged," her father replied soothingly. "That's more than your mother and I had when we were married."—Toronto Telegram.

A Disappointment.
"I hear that Mrs. Highbridge is much disappointed in her husband."
"Dreadfully. She understood he was a home-loving man, and now he wants to tag along with her everywhere she goes."

SURE THING
"Do you consider thirteen at table unlucky?"
"Yes, with food at present prices."

Of Course Not.
It's really not consistent. As any one can see. When a fellow's living in "A Flat," To move in loud "High C."

No Masquer.
"Yes, I went to hear that lady lecturer."
"Did you follow her?"
"Certainly not. I wouldn't follow a lady I didn't know, and besides I had my wife along."

Temporary Absence.
"What's the meaning of 'au revoir'?"
"It's what young authors say to their manuscripts when they send them out."

Joking the Jilted.
Tom (rejected and dejected)—I can never get her picture off my mind.
Dick—Printed there by her own negative, I suppose.

"Pig Iron."
Pig iron is so called because the molten metal is run into a long mass with shorter pieces attached to it at right angles. The long pieces are called the sow, and the shorter are called the pigs.

BEST HARVESTING OF FRUIT

Proper Picking and Handling Will Save Winter Spoilage—Sweetening Hastens Ripening.

Proper harvesting is the most important factor in preserving the keeping qualities of storage fruit. Picking when unripe, or allowing to hang too long are equally wrong. The seeds should be black and the stem should separate easily from the spur before picking is commenced. If the color is subnormal, it is sometimes policy to let the fruit hang for a few days, since lack of color is as damaging as some over-ripeness.

Careful handling is essential. Bruises either rot or dry out in storage, injuring the fruit in either case. Picking should be done in burlap-lined baskets, or bags, and the fruit should be handled as little as possible between the tree and the storage package. If picking is done in bags, not more than three-fourths of a bushel should be allowed to accumulate at a time, as it is impossible to handle a fuller bag without bruising the fruit on the ladder and limbs.

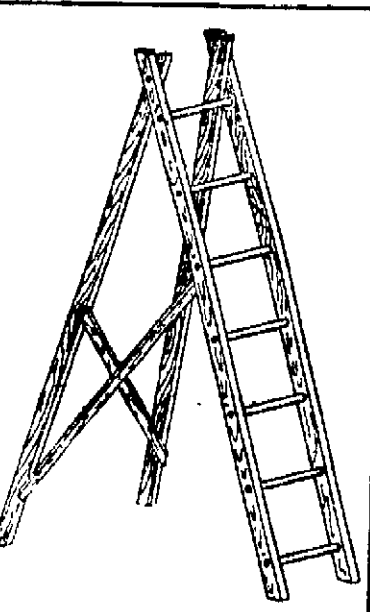

All sharp edges on crates, chutes or grading machines should be ground off so as not to cut the fruit. Whenever the apples move rapidly or fall, padding should be provided. Fruit should be moved from the tree to the storage as quickly as possible. The keeping quality is much shortened if fruit is allowed to stand in the orchard or shed after picking. The old policy of sweating fruit in piles under the tree has no scientific foundation, except as a means of ripening fruit quickly.

HANDY ORCHARD STEPLADDER

Wooden Appliance of About Eight Feet in Length Will Permit Picker to Reach Fruit.

About eight feet is the length of this step ladder. An eight-foot ladder will permit the picker to reach high enough to reach all of the fruit on a low headed fruit tree, except that which grows on the top central branches.

There is a good deal in selecting the material for a ladder. Writes Herbert A. Shearer in the Orchard and Orchard Stepladder.

Farm. It should be light, but it must be safe. It is easy for the picker to break a leg if the ladder should break.

The stringers should be made of straight-grained wood that does not split easily. Basswood or spruce meet the requirements about as well as anything, but there are varieties of pine that make good ladders.

The rungs should be of hickory, oak, swamp elm or some similar timber that will not break off short without splintering. If a ladder round splinters or splinters it won't break down suddenly.

The stringers of this ladder need not be heavier than 7/8 by 3 inches, tapered to two inches at the top, provided that the wood is tough and straight grained.

To make a fancy ladder both the stringers and the legs should be tapered.

AROMA IS GOOD STRAWBERRY

It is Early, Good Producer and Succeeds on Wide Variety of Soils—Also Ships Well.

Aroma is one of the very best of all strawberries, for both home and market use. It is early, productive, well-colored, ships well, succeeds on a wide variety of soils, is hardy and a good plant maker. Senator Dunlap, Peter Wood, William Belt, Gandy and Klondike, are other good sorts. The over-bearers disappoint as many as they please.

Use Hydrated Lime.
Fresh hydrated lime can be used in place of unslacked lime in making Bordeaux mixture, but one-third more should be used.

Turn Orchard Cover Crop.
Be sure to turn the orchard cover crop. If it is allowed to mature, the trees will likely suffer from loss of moisture.

Spray for Apples.
Spray the apples with Bordeaux mixture and arsenate of lead.

Help That Counts.
He who helps a little child helps humanity with a distinctness, with an immediateness which no other help given to human creatures in any other stage of their human life can possibly give again.—Phillips Brooks.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE SILLY WEATHER

"Ha, ha," laughed Old Man Weather, "what a joke it all is. I fool the people so they don't know what I'm going to do at all. First I sprinkle a few drops down upon them, then I let Mr. Sun shine for awhile, and I have a chat back of the clouds with the King and then I sprinkle a few more drops, and so on.

"But it is a joke to hear the people talk. They don't know what to make of me at all. They really, really don't. They don't know whether to be thoroughly puzzled, and it is just like that."

"I don't see why you shouldn't ask them for the money they're holding as a deposit to buy a new car."

"When they sold the old car they assumed I'd buy a new one, and you can't talk me out of keeping my word."

"That's their look out - if they just thought it - you don't say so."

"Why don't you tell them you can't afford a new car and you'd like to have the money -"

"The whole trouble is you haven't any backbone - you're afraid of them - you aren't man enough to talk right out to 'em."

"All right - but I will try."

"I don't see why you shouldn't ask them for the money they're holding as a deposit to buy a new car."

"When they sold the old car they assumed I'd buy a new one, and you can't talk me out of keeping my word."

GAS BUGGIES—It All Depends on the Method of Approach

The KITCHEN CABINET

Let's trouble To see how the present pain To where the sun will shine again, To live in God's own better way In walk, in talk, in act each day.

SEASONABLE DISHES

A winter salad which is not out of reach of anyone is prepared as follows:

Put through the meat grinder two fresh crisp carrots that have been kept crisp by proper care in the vegetable bin, add a tablespoonful of two of cabbage, a small onion, all put through the chopper except the onion, which should be minced with a knife; a stalk of celery will improve this combination, or lacking that, add a little celery salt. Mix with a highly seasoned mayonnaise and serve on lettuce. This gives the family the iron and vitamins needed to keep them in health.

Pork Tongue With Peas and Beets—Wash a fresh pork tongue and cook in boiling salted water until tender. Remove to a hot platter and mix the stock with a can of peas—fresh are better if obtainable. Let cook until done, then thicken with flour mixed with sweet cream; let all boil up together. Pour the gravy and peas around the tongue and serve hot. The beets should be cooked and let stand over night in a sweet, spicy vinegar.

Why not have a camping out dinner some night at home. Roast the potatoes on the shelf of the furnace door, or in the ashpan of the base-burner, broil the steak in a very hot iron pan sprinkled with salt, turn and cook quickly, spread with seasoning and butter and put into the large hot bun and eat open and served with lettuce, sandwich fashion. Serve pickles, olives, cream for the children and coffee for the grown-ups. This once and you will be asked to repeat your menu. Any dessert such as pie, cake or cookies to serve with the hot drink will be sufficient.

Even-size onions roasted on coals at the side of the fire, where they will not burn, are delicious. Peel off the outside, cut open and season with butter, salt and pepper.

For those who do not enjoy olive oil or who find it too expensive, the corn oil will prove very satisfactory. Make mayonnaise in the same manner as if using the olive oil. French dressing, too, is equally good.

MORE RELICS FOR D. A. R. CHAPTER

All those "daughters" who attended the chapter meeting on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. James H. Everett had a particularly enjoyable time. Four new members were received. They were Miss Gilbert Arms, Mrs. Chester Hall, Mrs. Gordon F. Whelton, Mrs. R. Lee Rose. The chapter historian, Miss Baker, read a report from the Ellenville newspaper of the 140th anniversary of the visit of George Washington to Ulster county written by T. L. Benedict. There was no entertainment.

Mrs. Alva S. Staples read a recent address delivered by Mrs. George Maynard Minor, president general after which Mrs. Everett read another address delivered by Mrs. Minor before the Southern Society in Memorial Continental Hall, December 8th, 1922, when Clemenceau was the guest of honor.

DeWitt Koons presented Wiltsack Chapter with three medals and a badge of much historic value. The badge was from the Holland Society of New York, commemorating the 300th anniversary of the discovery of the Hudson river.

The first medal was a replica of a medal designed to commemorate American Independence by the Provinces of the Netherlands, dated February 26th, 1782. The second was a replica of a medal commemorating the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation entered into between the United States of America and the United Netherlands, October 7th, 1782. The third was a replica of a medal struck off by order of the states general of the Provinces of the Netherlands in commemoration of the recognition of the independence of the United States of America, April 10th, 1782.

The hostesses for the afternoon were Mrs. James H. Everett, Mrs. J. A. McCombs and Mrs. John Brodhead.

TEXAS TOWN CENTURIES OLD

Ysleta, Now El Paso, Has Tradition It Was Founded in 1540 by Spanish Explorer.

A tradition which has been handed down through many generations of West Texas and New Mexico pioneers is that the little town of Ysleta, Texas, 18 miles southeast of El Paso, is the oldest settlement in the United States.

According to this tradition, Ysleta was founded in 1540 by Don Francisco Ysaguz Coronado, famed Spanish explorer. This would make Ysleta twenty-five years older than St. Augustine, Florida, which is accredited as being the oldest city in this country.

Yet there are no official records to substantiate the theory of Ysleta's antiquity. It is old, the oldest town in Texas, no doubt, but its origin is traceable only as far back as 1682, authoritatively.

According to church records at Ysleta, the town was founded by Antonio Otermin, Spanish governor of New Mexico, about the year 1682.—Detroit News.

Eclipse Aided Columbus.

An eclipse is said to have aided Columbus on the island of Jamaica a few years after he discovered America. The savages had taken Columbus and his companions prisoners and would give them no food. By his reckonings Columbus knew that an eclipse of the moon was coming. He called the Indian chiefs to him and told them that if they did not bring him and his companions food the very night he would take from them the light of the moon. At first they laughed at him, but when the dark shadow began to creep over the face of the moon they ran to him with all the food they could get together, he seeing him to forgive them and to order the moon to shed its light again. This happened March 1, 1494, a date by which, according to modern tables of eclipses, there would have been an eclipse.

Masterpieces of Wood Carving.

In the Italian Renaissance masterpieces in wood carving were elaborate choir stalls, elaborately carved ceilings and minor works of industrial art, such as carved wedding chests. In Spain wood carving flourished to a still greater extent. Here the art first showed Moorish influence, but during the late Gothic period French, and in the sixteenth century Italian influence. During the Seventeenth century polychrome sculpture in wood was perhaps the most characteristic form of Spanish sculpture. The masterpieces in the art were choir stalls and screens.

Chinese "Devil Drive."

Once in every 12 years the Chinese residents in the little city of Kuening, in the island of Borneo, exert themselves strenuously in a devil drive.

The devil driving is a beautiful affair in magnificent dresses and designs, for the devils are hunted by a great procession of floats carrying beautiful dressed young girls, loaded with gold ornaments and jewels. Other floats are adorned with vicious-looking paper dragons. Scattered throughout the mile-long procession are men carrying silk banners with threatening words written upon them to frighten the devils.

Modern Youth.

In front of a Broadway restaurant a ragged urchin was observed by a kindly disposed and prosperous individual who thought the youngster looked wistfully at the butter cakes being baked by the girl in the window. "Hungry, kid?" he asked. "Naw," came the scornful reply. "Can't a fellow look at a swell dame without drawin' a crowd?"

Invention of Spectacles.

Spectacles were invented in the Thirteenth century.

EXPLORERS TO PENETRATE UNKNOWN AREA IN AUSTRALIA

Center of Vast Continent Is Aim of Group of American and British Scientists.

A vast area in central Australia, that has remained virtually a mystery because of its inaccessibility, is to be penetrated by a group of British and American scientists, under the auspices of the British-American Exploration syndicate.

Two of the explorers are C. W. Rogers, of San Diego, and S. A. A. Waelly, who was with the Eleventh United States Engineers in France. Final arrangements will be made in Townsville, Australia, and the party will sail around Cape York and across the Gulf of Carpentaria to Port Darwin, where final stores will be shipped. An endeavor will be made to land between Port Darwin and Broome.

The party intends to proceed inland through country inhabited by negro tribes, which are said to be hostile to white men. The explorers hope to conciliate the tribe members and to gain valuable assistance from them.

The equipment of the party will include a small wireless telegraph plant by which it is hoped that communication may be maintained with cattle stations on the northwest coast. A motion picture machine will be used and pictures will be taken of features of the country and tribes, if possible.

It is estimated that the expedition will be away between one and two years. It hopes to work across Australia to the south.

MULE KICK DROVE E. W. SPROUL TO CONGRESS

Elliott W. Sproul of Chicago, Ill., says it all began with a mule's kick while he was working for a dollar a day at a foundry job in Port Wayne, Ind. He insists that he would never have been in congress were it not for the viciousness of that animal.

Sproul was a bricklayer by trade, but could get nothing to do, so he went into the Olds foundry stacking pig iron. A week later the superintendent asked him to drive a team of mules and Sproul took a chance. The two brutes certainly could kick, and when it came to unharnessing them he refused, and was fired on the spot. Fifteen years later Sproul was awarded the contract for building the largest erecting shop in the world at that time, and he dropped in on his old boss, the superintendent, with a $50,000 contract, which he gave him after repeating his story.

CZECHS CONSOLIDATE BANKS

Waste and Duplication Lessened by Merger of Institutions.

The year 1922 was notable in the development of banking in Czechoslovakia. Efforts have been made and successfully, to consolidate the banks under a system of joint control, by which it will be possible, by mutual agreement, to limit the field of activities, thus cutting out waste and duplication of efforts and bringing about greater business prosperity for all the institutions concerned.

One of the most far-reaching changes is the abolition of local branches of the larger banks. The business of these branches, such as the collection of deposits, is being taken over by the savings banks, which already cover the country.

For the last four years there has been progress toward consolidation of the financial system of the new republic, aimed particularly at financing the country's import and export trade, and the accomplishments of 1922 round out this program.

Everlasting Mystery.

Flora had hash for breakfast. She looked at the last mouthful of her portion earnestly as she poised it on her fork. Then she passed it out of sight. But the mystery was still in her mind. "Daddy," said she, "what was hash when it was alive?"

HARD TO GET BACK AT HIM

Editor Seemingly Had Maneuvered Himself Into a Position That Was Impregnable.

Back in the days of personal journalism the talent of the editorial writer was devoted not so much to the discussion of the merits of public questions as to vituperation of the leaders of the opposing party, particularly the editor of the vile opposition newspaper, writes Russell M. Seeds in the Indianapolis Star. In those days William R. Nelson, who later built up the Kansas City Star into a great property, and Samuel E. Morse, well remembered as editor of the Indianapolis Sentinel, were partners, publishing the Fort Wayne Sentinel. The Fort Wayne Gazette, the Republican morning paper, had recently been purchased by one Beecham, who, being of an inquisitive turn of mind, hunted up the private history and peccadilloes of Messrs. Nelson and Morse and stuck the data in his safe for a rainy day. It came right soon, for the fall campaign opened with an attack on him in the Sentinel. He came back with a broadside that was a scorcher.

Morse had got down to the office early that morning and was in such a hurry to get some early copy on the hook that he had deferred reading the Gazette. But in a few minutes Nelson came in in a towering rage and threw the paper down on the desk.

"Sam, look here at what that vile and dirty wretch has printed about us! It's the most outrageously scandalous stuff you ever read!"

"What's the use of getting excited over a pack of lies, Bill?"

"Lies, b—! It's worse than that! That villain has told the truth!"

"Pied Piper" Historic Personage.
Browning's famous poem, "The Pied Piper of Hamelin," is reputed to have a historic basis. According to an old chronicler the affair happened, very much as described by Browning, at the town of Hameln, in Brunswick, on June 26, 1284. There came to the town "an odd kind of companion," who, for the fantastical coat which he wore, was called Pied Piper. He offered to clear the town of rats for a certain sum, accomplished his task, was refused his just payment and, in revenge, piped the children out of the town, just as he had done the rats, and led them into an opening in a hillside, whence none ever returned. The street through which the piper conducted his victims was Bungen, and from that day to this no music is ever allowed to be played in this particular street. The old story was brought to the poet's notice by his father, who himself wrote an amusing poem on the subject.

The Reward of Thrift.

The Woman has many friends among the young people. One day while she was talking with a high school janitor he exclaimed abruptly: "I've beaten rugs all my life." Then he added with a grin, "But I've got one on mother now." Inquiries followed, and he told his story. "You know, I've worked co-operative at high school for two years, and I worked last summer vacation, too, until I had $64 saved up. One hot morning I wanted to go to the country, but mother announced: 'The dining room rug must be cleaned this morning, Frank. Then I just hauled out my cash and said: 'Ma, won't you please buy a new rug?' Say, she was sure surprised, but she bought it, and, oh, boy! I haven't cleaned a rug since."—Chicago Journal.

Hats for the Kiddies.

Close spring hat shapes quite deep and of medium size are popular for the junior types, while much the same shape is used for the child, with a very shallow back brim. Wide ribbons and narrow ones as well are well thought of as trimmings and there are single ends used as sashes on some of the junior models.

BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America)

BOY SCOUTS' ANNIVERSARY

The Boy Scouts of America throughout the entire country celebrated the week of the thirtieth anniversary of the movement February 8-15. Demonstrations of scoutcraft, rallies, parent-and-son meetings, radio messages of endorsement of scouting by prominent people, and the taking of the scout oath by well-known men had a place on the program. Fifty thousand cards containing a splendid endorsement of the movement were placed in street cars throughout the country.
Thousands of billboard posters picturing scout training appeared in the different cities. The car cards and posters were the donation of stanch supporters of the movement to help bring scouting's message to every American man, woman and child.

One of the most impressive acts of the entire week occurred on the evening of February 8 when every scout and scout leader throughout the country reaffirmed the scout oath.

"On my honor, I will do my best:
"1. To do my duty to God and my country, and to obey the scout law;
"2. To help other people at all times.

"3. To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight."
In many communities the respective days of anniversary week were devoted to scouting in connection with the school, the church, the home, and the community. Special demonstrations were given showing what scouting is doing to cooperate with each of these institutions.

As the public grows more familiar with the scout program of character building and citizenship training, it demands—"Why are there not more boy scouts?" In response to this question, the Boy Scouts of America made an extraordinary effort to make room in the ranks by anniversary week for 100,000 new members. This effort was termed the anniversary round-up. In this connection every scout the country over had an opportunity of doing a national good turn,
by bringing to the ranks one more boy
to advance in the work of good citizenship. Indications point to an oversubscription of the quota of 100,000.
With the increase proposed, the total boy membership of the Boy Scouts of America will reach the half million mark.

President Harding, in his appreciation of the work of the Boy Scouts of America and his interest in seeing more boys members of the organization, authorized the presentation in his name of a large silk American flag to each region attaining its quota of increase in membership for the anniversary round-up; a handsome set of silk streamers—red, white and blue—to each of the 600 local councils that reaches its goal; and a similar but smaller set of streamers to each troop that enrolls the specified number of new members. President Harding is the honorary president of the Boy Scouts of America.

HAS FAITH IN BOYS

A group of scouts unsolicited, recently took the responsibility of guarding a certain dangerous crossing, of getting little children over in safety.
These boys didn't tell anybody of what they were doing. They weren't looking for credit—they were just doing.

Last winter a scout stood guard over a live wire for several hours on a freezing night. In passing, he had seen the danger, and on his own initiative guarded passersby until the repairmen came. He froze his ear, but he did his duty as a scout.

And when the boy scout organization through its chief scout executive, said: "We claim there are no naturally bad boys, though there are idle, mis-directed or undirected, mischievous, heedless or mistaken boys." It based that assertion, and the following one on just such facts as these quoted:

"We claim that if you give a boy
plenty of interesting, worthwhile things to do in his out-of-school or after-work hours that the chances are he will have little inclination to mischievous mischief or vicious amusement."

AID INJURED BOY

While playing Robert McKnight of Bowling Green took a big jump and his foot landed upon a broken bottle.
A large artery was cut and began to bleed profusely. Scout Norman Loomis was present. Following his first aid instructions, he promptly stopped the flow of blood by use of a tourniquet. He then took the injured boy upon his back and carried him to his home.

ROTARY USES SCOUT MOTTO

In conformity with the scout slogan,
"Do a Good Turn Daily," boy scouts of Tampa, Fla., have performed excellent service to their community. The boys declare that the old saying, "Give to the world the best you have, and the best will come back to you," is especially significant in their case. For now come their friends, the Rotarians, at a recent state convention with a memento coin on which is stamped the motto, "Do a Good Turn Daily to Some Boy."

Found Peeling Relaxation.
President McKinley never found peeling for his portraits likewise, but said it was a period for relaxation.

LEGENDS TELL OF LOST CITY

But Prospectors and Others Have Vainly Sought for It in the Mountains of Mexico.

One has but to open one's ears in Mexico to hear the most entrancing stories. Little mining villages in the nearby mountains are provisioned by mule train from Cuicuilco, says a writer in the National Geographic Magazine. Through Indian villages pass the trails that are as they were in Montezuma's time, and have been used so long that the unshod hoofs have worn holes 18 inches deep in the enduring rock.

In these hills—somewhere—is the Lost City of Bacis. One wanders for days and miles until he comes to the village of Bacis; then one goes no farther. The mountains have become impassable. The little river which brawls down the canyon is boxed in precipitous walls.

Prospectors have tried to fight their way farther and have returned bar-fied; and when a prospector quits no other man born or woman need try the traverse. Even the Indians declare they do not know the higher reaches of the hills.

Yet—so say those who repeat tradition—orange sometimes float down
the little river, and bits of oddly woven cloth that have caught on twigs and carved wood. A legend has grown that somewhere in the hills is the Lost City of Bacis. There are men and women living there, say those who believe, and their houses are filled with gold and there are fragrant orchards on the open slopes.

It is said that the Indians have guarded the Lost City since time immemorial. Not even the Spaniards reached it: It is still as it was in Montezuma's days.

One feels grateful to those who tell such tales. They are pleasant to hear.

Alaska's Minerals.

Mineral production in Alaska,
which has shown a declining tendency in recent years, staged a marked comeback during 1922, according to United States geological survey estimates and turned out more than $18,- 000,000 in new wealth. The value of Alaska's gold output for the year was fixed by the survey at $7,720,000, of copper $9,000,000, silver $730,000;
coal, $450,000, with enough lead, platinum, petroleum and marble to make up the balance. In 1921 the output of Alaskan minerals was valued by the survey at $17,000,000.

"The Alaskan mining industry is advancing, not retrograding," the survey said. "In fact, though the value of its present output is small compared with that of the past, the industry is now on a more substantial basis than ever before."

As to the future, the survey estimates that unworked placer ground in Alaska still holds $350,000,000 in gold, which will be recovered by the methods of dredging now being followed. The resources of copper and other minerals contained in hard rock deposits, it was added, cannot be estimated as yet, but the opening of coal deposits, which will cheapen the costs of production, leaves the prospect favorable to expansion of general mining enterprises.

Lost Fastnesses of Petroleum.

Do they want Greenland explored?
Discover oil in the center of it. Greenland is the world's largest island—supposed to be chiefly icebergs from its center to its circumference, but under the icebergs there is solid land containing many of the minerals that the earth bears elsewhere.

Coal is known to exist there, and where coal is found petroleum often is.
It has been searched for, from Green-land's icy mountains to India's coral strands, but the icy mountains are still unexplored. It is evident that the oil interests "will leave no stone unturned" in their pursuit of the last source of supply.

The world is being pretty well pepper-boxed full of holes by deep-drilling apparatus. No polar glacier is going to hold back the treasure hunters.
They will turn the glaciers into steam and bring the face of the earth to the sun's rays for the first time in 25,000 years. Such a process, however, is il-lible to raise the price of gasoline.

Forewarned Is Forearmed.

The fair young thing was making her first long trip alone and had been warned of hold, bad men and the many dangers that beset her path.

She had to change trains and was puzzled, as she said to a young man:
"Sir, what train do I take?"

"Where are you going?" he inquired.
She glared lolly and swept on to another. One of those dreadful men!

This was repeated three times. Finally she asked the ticket man, and when he asked where she was going she hesi-tated and then boldly said: "Chicago."

He put her on the Chicago train, and just as it was drawing out of the station she leaned out of the window and shouted back: "Ha, ha! I fooled you I'm going to New York."

Wind-Driven Propellers.

Windmills to drive ships are the product of the French inventions department, an official war agency that has been continued. These windmills are intended to enable countries without coal or oil fields to sail the seas without coal or petroleum. The power of the windmill is transmitted below decks, where it later appears at the propellers. Matches to be used under water by divers who want to light torches are another achievement of the French government. It must be great fun to run an official invention office in times of peace.—The Nation's Business.

It's the Unconscious Ones.

"Choose your words well; it will come easier when you have to eat them," says an exchange. But, brother, well chosen words aren't the kind
one has to eat.—Boston Evening Transcript.

Kellogg's Bran is Guaranteed to give relief BECAUSE IT IS ALL BRAN!

Relief from constipation, whether it be mild or chronic, will follow the regular, every-day eating of Kellogg's Bran. We have thousands of letters from former sufferers who tell us that the natural "bulkaction" of this wonderful cereal product has given relief they have not known for years. We guarantee that Kellogg's Bran will free the system from constipation because it is ALL BRAN—not a composition in which bran is added. If constipation is to be permanently relieved, you must eat ALL BRAN—that's why your physician will recommend Kellogg's for constipation.

Constipation creates toxic conditions which poison the blood and every organ of the body. It slows you down mentally and physically, and creates sick headaches, nausea, bad breath, pimples—finally, in many cases, leading to Bright's disease, diabetes and other dreaded illnesses. You must fight constipation with Kellogg's Bran regularly if you want health!

You'll say Kellogg's Bran is really delicious—it has a nut-like flavor that appeals to the most fastidious appetite. Just eat it as a cereal, sprinkled on hot or cold cereals or cooked with hot cereals, allowing two table-spoonfuls of bran for each person. Be certain to eat at least two table-spoonfuls each day; as much with each meal in chronic cases. Kellogg's is delicious made into puddings, macaroons, raisin bread, griddlecakes. Recipes in every package. Kellogg's Bran is served by leading hotels, clubs and restaurants in individual packages. It is sold by all grocers.

TOO-DARING MOTH

How Lola Montez Scorching Her Wings in Royalty's Flame.

Humble Brooklyn Grave Hilda Dancer Who Once Swayed Peleles of Powerful European States.

America may have forgotten Lola Montez. A gravestone in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn, N. Y., bearing the inscription: "Mrs. Eliza Gilbert; died Jan. 18, 1861, aged 42," may mean little to the residents of Brooklyn who happen to pass it, but Europe will never forget the celebrated dancer whose dust lies beneath that stone, says an Associated Press dispatch from Berlin.

Lola Montez died in a New York almshouse, alone and penniless. Thirteen years previously she was the toast of all the European capitals and a prize favorite of King Ludwig I of Bavaria, whose tottering throne she saved by fleeing from Munich and becoming a world wanderer. The dancer's romantic life is now being shown daily in the theaters of Berlin and other German cities in a moving picture play which is attracting more attention than the romance of Mme. Pompadour or of Mme. Du Barry.

Lola Montez' life story requires little embellishment for the cinema. Gaby Deslys and other more modern favorites of kings never swayed Europe as did Lola. Poets, novelists, dramatists and painters have perpetuated her fame. She overthrew one government in Bavaria which opposed her political sway and forced the succeeding government to make her countess of Ladfeldt. When Ludwig I was urged by his ministers that he either must give up Lola or his throne in order to save Bavaria he is said to have replied: "Without Lola there can be no Ludwig."

Queen Therese was powerless to combat her dancer rival. The famous dancer was born in Montrose, Scotland, the daughter of an officer named Gilbert. After an adventurous youth in England she became popular in Paris as a Spanish dancer. She represented herself as an Andalusian, and always was spoken of in Europe as "the Spanish dancer." She went to the Munich opera in 1846 and won instant success and Ludwig's devotion. For two years she maintained a supreme position in the face of violent opposition in political and artistic circles.

The Munich students were her loyal supporters, she danced at their banquets and won their hearts so completely that they paraded and rioted whenever attempts were made to force her to leave Bavaria. She overshadowed all other political issues, and when finally she decided to flee rather than force Ludwig to abdicate the throne, the Bavarian government had to close the university to prevent students from making demonstrations against Lola's official enemies.

From Bavaria Lola fled to Paris, where she wrote her memoirs and published many daring essays on the emancipation of woman. From Paris she went to England, where she married an officer named Heald, from whom she was soon separated. She toured India and Australia, and in 1852 went to the United States and appeared in San Francisco, New York and other cities in a spectacular travesty on Bavarian politics, recounting her experiences in Munich, which now, 70 years later, are being shown in moving pictures.

Substitute for Cotton and Wool. Flax and cotton may be doomed to displacement by a newly discovered fiber, called by South American Indians "arghan." This fiber, discovered by Sir Henry Wickham, a pioneer of the rubber industry, is half as strong again as the best hemp and flax, resists the action of sea water, weaves into fine cloth that bleaches and dyes easily, and has unexcelled wearing qualities. Arghan may replace some, at least, of the textiles most familiar to us. These are oddly few. There must be thousands of substances capable of supplying clothing fibers, yet throughout the ages dependence has been mainly placed upon the big four—wool, flax, silk and cotton. Hence, the discovery and evolution of another new and promising textile fiber must be recognized as of considerable importance.

National Board to Build Highways. It is expected that the Australian government will introduce a main road bill for New South Wales at the next session, creating a board to take charge of and finance the main roads for that province, says Consul R. Wormuth, Sydney. In a report to the Department of Commerce. At present there is a lack of coherence and consequent inefficiency in the matter of road building, because the control is divided among hundreds of shires and municipalities. Motor vehicles are already competing strongly with the railroads, but their successful operation is badly hampered by poor roads.

A Simple Method. "How did you manage to escape from the footpad unharmed and without being robbed?" "When he pointed his pistol at me and demanded my money or my life I stepped forward, took him by the button hole and said: 'I have just heard a dandy! Once there was an Irishman named Pat who met another Irishman named Mike, and said to him:—'The bandit uttered a scream and fled like a scared roebuck.'—Kansas City Star.

INCOME TAX INFORMATION

A free question and answer bureau is being conducted by The Freeman for readers who desire information on federal or state income taxes. It is personally edited by Charles A. Secor, of Secor, Ronder & Co., tax counselors and public accountants of Kingston, New York, and Washington, and all rights are reserved. All questions will be answered confidentially by letter to our readers and a two cent stamp should be enclosed for reply postage.

Item 12. The new 1922 blue colored Federal tax blanks for corporations that were issued two weeks ago by collectors' offices do not indicate just where net losses during 1921 may be deducted from 1922 income, or added to 1922 losses. This oversight can be remedied by using the line entitled "other deductions (f)." Proof of 1921 losses should be submitted by filing a schedule of 1921 income, expenses and deductions copied in all particulars from your 1921 office copy of the last report you submitted and using the caption "Copy of 1921 return." No balance sheet is required, or other schedules. The same method should be used in carrying forward losses on individual returns.

Bear in mind that while all losses may be carried forward on Federal returns for corporations and individuals, such cumulative method is not permissible by the State law.

GOOD AND BAD LUCK SNEEZES

Peculiar Beliefs Have Been Handed Down From the Earliest Days of the World's History.

When everyone seems to be sneezing, it is interesting to recall the many queer superstitions which have been associated with sneezing from the earliest times.

The Greeks always regarded it as lucky to sneeze between noon and midnight, but most unlucky to sneeze between midnight and noon. In fact, it is said that they used to get back into bed for a while if they happened to sneeze while getting up in the morning.

The old custom, which still survives, of saying "God bless you" to those who sneeze, undoubtedly originated in the days when plagues and epidemics were rampant over Europe. It was noticed that those who sneezed died shortly afterward from the prevailing epidemic, and they were therefore greeted with the words, "God bless you," meaning "God help you." In those days people used to accompany these words with the sign of the cross, but this custom now seems to be extinct.

Another old superstition maintained that to sneeze to the right was a lucky sign, but it was unlucky to sneeze to the left.

Sneezing is associated even with bridegrooms, for it was always thought a sign of coming good luck if they sneezed on their wedding day.

Essay's Prime Requisite.

Of all forms of literature the essay is the one which least calls for the use of long words. . . . It should give pleasure; the desire which impels us when we take it from the shelf is simply to receive pleasure. Everything in an essay must be subordinated to that end. It should lay us under a spell with its first word, and we should only wake, refreshed, with its last. In the interval we may pass through the most varied experiences of amusement, surprise, interest, indignation; we may soar to the heights of fantasy with Lamb or plunge to the depths of wisdom with Bacon, but we must never be roused. The essay must lap us about and draw its curtain across the world.—Times Literary Supplement.

Opportune Moment.

The children were going to bed and the woman and the children's mother sat in an adjoining room talking while the disrobing, bathing and toothbrushing were in progress. Suddenly a gust of angry words, whisperings and scufflings suggested that the already mentioned disrobing was not proceeding as amicably as might be hoped. The woman and the mother paused to listen. Then the voice of Jean, aged five, rose in just wrath. "You're a naughty, bad boy, Billy, and if you don't stop that right away I'm going to tell God on you in just a minute." It is to be supposed that prayers were next in order and that the presence of the Almighty was imminent.—New York Sun.

Timely Thoughts.

A well-known lawyer was chiding a legal friend for passing him in a motorcar without recognition. "Sorry I didn't see you," said his friend. "Was — driving?" "Yes," said the lawyer. "Well," rejoined his friend, "when — is driving you think only of your Maker and not of your earthly friends!"

WASTE PLACES ARE TRAPS

Flights Over Deserts, Wildernesses and Great Swamps Full of Perils—Five Men Who Set Out on Training Flight in Free Balloon in 1921 Never Heard From—Student Flier Spends Week of Harrowing Experiences in the Everglades.

The disappearance of Col. F. C. Marshall and Lieut. C. L. Weber, army aviators, after they started December 7 on a flight from San Diego to Tucson, Ariz., recalls similar disappearances of army and navy fliers and the searches made for them.

While army officials have long given up hope that Colonel Marshall and Lieutenant Weber would be found alive, the belief is still faintly adhered to that their bodies and the wreck of their plane may be eventually recovered.

Either of the two regions in which they may have been forced to land is a desert waste. The section east of Tucson, where a plane believed to have been there was last seen, is extremely rocky and mountainous. Searchers might look for months without coming upon the ravine in which the wreckage may lie hidden. The sands of the desert to the west and south of the city are so fine that a slight breeze would be sufficient to cover the wreckage under a dune in a short time.

Big Air Fleet in Search.

For many days a fleet of planes scoured the region, flying as low and as far as was compatible with safety. The rumor that the charred bodies were seen lying in a gorge near the Papago Indian reservation, near the border line, was found incorrect by troops of cavalry that aided in the search.

In March, 1921, five men from the Pensacola naval air station set out in a training flight in a free balloon. Quartermaster G. K. Wilkinson was pilot, and had with him four enlisted flying students. Neither the balloon nor its passengers were ever seen again. A squadron of seaplanes and several dirigibles, aided by a fleet of ships, scoured the waters out to sea for miles.

Then trappers in the Everglades reported hearing voices in the swamps at night and the searching airplanes made flights for weeks over the great wilderness. Months afterward, what was believed to be the remains of a wicker balloon basket was sighted far at sea, and it was finally believed the fliers were lost in the Atlantic.

Raymond White, as a student flier, spent almost a week of peril and hunger in the Everglades. He was forced down when the gasoline gave out and crashed into the almost impenetrable cypress swamps. That was only the start of his experience. Mosquitoes were so thick and voracious he had to cover face and arms with grease from his ship; he had no matches to build a signal fire, and was forced to take to trees at night to avoid animals he heard prowling about. He finally made his way, subsisting on herbs and grasshoppers, to a Seminole Indian camp, and was sent by them to a distant farmhouse, where, after a week, his comrades found him.

Capt. C. W. Daumann and Lieut. E. J. Verhuyden were two other fliers who lost their lives in a free balloon. They started in the national balloon race from St. Louis in 1919 and were never heard from until their bodies were washed up by the waters of Lake Huron.

Most Losses on Border.

While many other fliers have been lost in various sections of the country for two or three day stretches, all were found, and aviators declare the number of men actually lost is very small in view of the increase in flying. Most of the army's losses of that sort have occurred in the desert sections of the Southwest, where fliers are employed in the border patrol.

The most tragic of these occurrences in army records was the loss of Lieuts. F. B. Waterhouse and C. H. Connolly, who lost their way in a storm while on patrol and were forced to land far south in southern California, on the shores of the gulf. For 10 days they were without food and constantly growing weaker, then, when finally aided by two Mexican fishermen, they were taken almost within sight of food and friends and brutally murdered and robbed.

Lieutenants Davis and Peterson were lost in the desert along the Rio Grande, and although they declared they had not been in Mexican territory, they were captured by Mexican bandits almost in sight of aid and held for ransom for some days. They were forced to undergo many privations and were about to be killed when the ransom was paid.

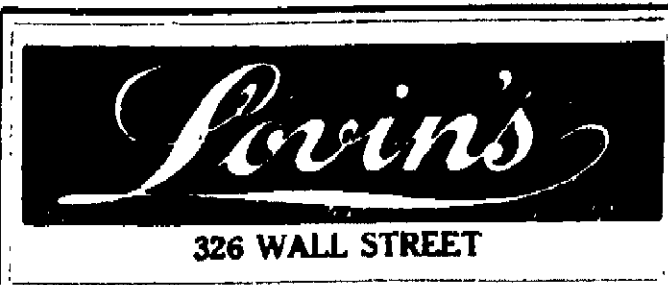

Lieut. Alexander Pearson was forced down in Mexican territory. The fleet of searchers had given him up for lost. He found a dilapidated raft on the river, however, and drifted his way home. Four months later his plane was found in the ravine where it had fallen, a new engine was installed and the plane flown back.

PEAK NAMED FOR INDIAN GIRL

Honor Awarded for Valuable Services Rendered to Expedition Led by Lewis and Clark.

Sacajawea, which in the Indian tongue means "Bird Woman," was born in a little Indian village on the banks of Snake river, just west of the Bitter Root mountains, in what is now the state of Idaho, in 1790.

When Sacajawea was nine years of age, her people, the Shoshones, or Snake River Indians, were suddenly attacked by their foes, the Minnatarees of Knife river. While Sacajawea was making her way alone across the river she was caught and taken prisoner. Later she was sold as a slave to Toussaint Chaboneau, a French half-breed wanderer, at Brunswick, N. D. He married her when she was fourteen years old.

Sacajawea and her husband, and their papoose accompanied a party of white explorers, led by Lewis and Clark, on a long journey.

One day the Indian girl risked her own life to save some valuable papers, maps, instruments, books, magazines and medicine, when their boat nearly capsized. Sacajawea swam out and brought the articles back to the boat in safety.

When the travelers reached the land of Sacajawea's birth her presence saved the white men from being killed by the hostile Indians. Sacajawea also foiled a plot to steal all of the horses of the expedition by warning the leaders of the plans of the Snake River tribe.

A few years ago the geographical survey named for Sacajawea the great peak in the Bridger range, where she was captured during her childhood, and where she later pointed out the pass over the mountain now used by one of the great railways.

GROTESQUE DOLLS OF JAPAN

Little Girl Will Dress Up Cushion to Look Like Live Baby and Tie It on Her Back.

The Japanese have a genius for making dolls. They make them of anything—flowers, fruit, beans, even of a few wisps of straw. Their quaint humor finds free play in this field; the children are pleased with the odd ones, the more grotesque the better.

Tiny children draw and cut out surprisingly clever dolls from paper. A little girl will dress up a cushion and get some one to tie it on her back; one has to look twice to see if it is a real baby.

For the girls' doll festival in March of every year, and the boys' festival in May, such an array of dolls is set out as could not be matched for originality and beauty.

These dolls are extremely small, but represent with surprising skill and exactness the imperial court (in the girls' festival) or figures from history, myth, the drama or everyday life.—Asia Magazine.

How Male Albatross Makes Love.

Little is known of the habits of the albatross, although many persons are familiar with this bird as it is depicted in "The Ancient Mariner."

A distinguished British writer, in describing their mating habits, informs us that "when a male albatross makes love he stands by the female on the nest, raises his wings, spreads his tail and elevates it, throws up his head with the bill in the air or stretches it straight out forward as far as he can, and then utters a curious cry. While uttering the cry, the bird sways his neck up and down. The female responds with a similar note and they bring the tips of their bills lovingly together. This sort of thing goes on for half an hour or so at a time."

Admission to the Bar.

Each state prescribes its own rules and regulations with reference to admission to the bar. These are not uniform. Most of them require the applicant to pass an examination, and if he can do so and will subscribe to the oath of office he will be admitted to practice regardless of where he obtained his legal education. The oath of office is usually to the effect that the applicant will support the Constitution and laws of the United States and the constitution and laws of the particular state in which he makes application for admission.

Finances.

"Now I'll be, Mary, just I'll be. When I married you, y'un'stand, I said I'd stick for life, an' you said, solemn an' regular, you said you'd leave all others an' cling only to me, you did. That's all. Now I ast you as a lady, I ast you this: Did I say anything about bringin' home my money every week an' gettin' 35 cents a day for lunch, huh? Was anythin' mentioned about me not bein' th' banker? I ast you as a lady, that's all. What I'm gettin' at, y'un'stand, Mary, is who'm I workin' for, Me, You or Us? Not that I wanta interfere, y'un'stand, Mary, not 'tall. Only, it's gettin' 'bout time we stop talkin' so much 'bout that 'ere bond o' matrimony an' God-bless-our-home, an' take up th' subject o' finances. That's me, finances!"—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Short-Sighted Policy.

In the southeast corner of Minnesota are situated the famous Indian "pipestone" quarries, the scene of much of Longfellow's poem, "Hiawatha." Years ago, says Amy Rolfe Emerson, in the Mentor Magazine, thousands of Indians and many tourists came yearly to the quarries—the Indians to dig the soft red stone from which peace pipes are carved, and the tourists to see the ground most sacred to the Indian. The people of the town of Pipestone have permitted blasting to be done in the quarries, and a drainage ditch to empty into Wabesa falls, says the writer. Few visit the quarries today.

Work Dollar the Better Kind.

"Work is better than luck," said Uncle Eben. "De luck dollar is all by itself, but de work dollar tells you dat's plenty more where he come from."—Washington Evening Star.

Word "Jade" of Spanish Origin.

The name jade is derived from the Spanish piedra de Ijda, or "stone of the loins." Early Spanish explorers found natives of Central and South America wearing precious stones as amulets, to protect them against pain. One of the most interesting jade ornaments worn in olden times was a girdle which gave out a musical tinkle when the wearer walked. Jade is thought to instill virtue into the heart of its wearer. Imperial personages were never permitted to remove their jade jewels, as each was worn for some symbolic purpose.

The Harvest Doll.
The making of the "Mell Shear" or "Doll," which was such a feature in England of the harvest home rejoicings of the past, is an almost forgotten custom among the farm laborers of the present day. In a few rural areas, however, the old-time custom is still observed. The last sheaf to be cut is decked up like a doll, with a long white dress bedecked with gaily colored ribbons, and when the loading has been finished this doll is hoisted on a tall pole and carried by the tallest laborer to the farmstead, where all his colleagues join in an old-time chorus, the burden of which is that the farmer must now provide them with "a good harvest home, plenty of good ale, and some ha'pence to spend." In some places the "Mell Doll" is hung to the kitchen ceiling for twelve months until replaced by its successor next harvest.

African's Tell-Tale Smiles.
When a native of Central Africa smiles, he immediately betrays his identity. His teeth are filed and sometimes colored to show to what tribe he belongs. The women of the Fula tribe stain their teeth blue, yellow and purple, leaving a white patch here and there. These women are veritable "rainbows of fashion," with their contrasting colors. Sometimes the women stain their fingers, toes and hair also. Then they feel sure they are much more "dressed up" than any of their neighbors. In time of war, or any kind of trouble among the tribes, the shaped or colored teeth are a good means of identification. A spy from another tribe can be detected immediately.

Transplanted Man.
I once knew a clever foreigner who argued that transplanting from one soil to another, if the tree endures it at all, is likely to beget a more vigorous and luxuriant growth; and that, by the same token, the man who early enough in his life exchanges his nationality and even his language, if he takes root and brings anything with him from the country of his birth, will have two eyes with which to behold the world instead of one. In two or three languages men we often find a liberality of view not characteristic of him only to the manner born.—Felix H. Schelling, in "Appraisements and Asperities."

Tinkling Clocks.
A clock which does not tick is reported to have been invented by a German scientist who has been delving in the field of oscillation. A selected audience of government officials, scientists and newspaper men witnessed a demonstration of inventions of this nature perfected by Heinrich Schusterstein, of Berlin. A noiseless timepiece, which operates without a lever, was one of a number of specimens Schusterstein used to show the technical importance of oscillating power for high-speed power engines and in the propulsion of ships, airplanes and gliders.

Fact About Faces.
No woman's face lasts a man more than a year or two. However beautiful it is, he knows all about it; he may not be sick of it, but he ceases to take an interest in it. So long as one doesn't get repulsive, it doesn't matter what one looks like; you may catch a man with your face, but it's with something else you hold him—with charm, if you've got any, with interest in his immensely important affairs, by making him feel he's a god, your god, and that nobody understands him as you do.—From The Staff Lip by W. L. George.

WHY

Courage Is Dependent on Fear as an Antidote

Courage is absolutely dependent upon fear as an antidote. There would be no beautiful girls if all the girls were equally beautiful.

The fact is that the thing we extol so much and call courage is almost invariably the result of fear in the beginning. What happens is that in the beginning we are afraid of something. This puts us on our guard, and we start in to prepare ourselves against it. When the critical moment comes we seem to do a heroic thing. Well, maybe it is, but it is all due to the preparation based on fear.

What I say about courage, therefore, is that it isn't so much a quality in itself, to be brought up by exercise just the way you increase your biceps, as it is a quality inherent in training. Courageous acts are of two kinds: those based on complete ignorance of the consequences, and those based on fear. In case you happen to be unusually timid, the thing to do is to use your timidity as an asset, get it to work for you by preparing you for what is to come. That is where intelligence, which is sometimes useful, can be employed to advantage.

To be afraid and not to know what to do about it is very bad, because a man who is afraid and doesn't do anything about it will generally prove a coward in emergencies. He will turn and run. But if he takes hold of his fear when he has time enough to make it useful to him, then he can acquire enough control over it to keep it under just enough at critical moments.

When you see an acrobat standing on his hands in midair, on top of a church spire, you shudder with sympathetic fear. If you should try a stunt like that you would topple over; the mere thought of it makes you faint. But if you had six months to practice in you would no doubt get away with it even if it was only by an eighth of an inch.—Thomas L. Mason in New York Sun.

NATURE KNEW HER BUSINESS

Why the Fact That Ice Floats Has Had Important Bearing on History of Earth.

If it were not for one peculiar property of water, the past history of the earth would have been completely altered and man himself might never have been born.

Almost everything gets bigger when it is heated and smaller when it is cooled, and in the ordinary course of events water does exactly the same thing. But the strange point is that if you cool water to seven degrees above freezing point it stops getting smaller and begins to expand, continuing to do so until it becomes ice.

That, of course, is why ice always occupies more space than the water from which it is made, and so easily bursts jugs and water pipes. It also explains why ice floats in water.

But if water followed the general rule, and got continually smaller as it grew colder, ice would be heavier than water and would form at the bottom of ponds, rivers, and seas instead of at the top.

That would mean that in past ice ages all the living inhabitants of the water, including the progenitors of man, would have been frozen to death, for numerous forms of life are always to be found beneath the ice-topped seas of today.

Why Penguin Lost Wings.
Ages ago the penguin, whose wings are short, paddle-like flappers, entirely useless for flight, could fly as well as any other sea bird. Since the bird inhabits only remote lands in or near the Antarctic regions, where it has few human or animal enemies, it came to spend all its time on land or in the water. Generation after generation it failed to use its wings for flying, and so in the course of long evolution those wings became very small and stiff, and lost their long feathers, until now they cannot be moved at the middle joint like the wings of flying birds.

But the penguins became wonderful divers and swimmers, using their wings one after the other as a man paddles a canoe with a double paddle, and steering with their feet.

Why Cooked Foods Are Best.
All foods are more stimulating when eaten raw than when cooked. Cold and heat are depressive, and moderate heat has the most stimulating effect. The mixture of several foods has a stimulating, cumulative effect. The act of chewing causes depression of the pulse; the effect of stimulating substances is diminished, and that of depressive substances is increased thereby.

Why Stars Twinkle.
Stars twinkle because they are so distant that not even the most powerful telescope can show them to have a visible disk, like the planets. That light is a mere point and susceptible to varying atmospheric densities.

GOOD STALLION MANAGEMENT

Many Promising Animals Have Years of Usefulness Reduced by Neglect in Winter.

Many promising draft stallions have their years of usefulness greatly reduced through neglect during the winter months. The ideal method of handling a stallion is to give him daily work to do in order that he may eat his feed with relish and keep his body and muscles in trim. Where such a method is practiced, the animal, accustomed to daily handling and control, does not become unruly and hard to manage. Furthermore, he is groomed at least once daily when in use.

Unfortunately for the horse business, the common practice in stallion management is to put the horse in a shed, out of sight and hearing of other horses, where he is fed at irregular intervals and seldom groomed at all. Even though a small yard is sometimes provided, it is very often so filthy as to be more of a damage than an advantage.

No horse, however sound, can stand such treatment long without injury. A good, vigorous stallion needs at least six miles' travel daily or its equivalent in work.

The amount of feed to be given depends upon the exercise given, the condition of the horse and his ability to make use of the feed he gets.

The Kansas experiment station suggests the following as good combinations:

1. Oats, timothy or prairie hay.
2. Oats four parts, corn six parts, timothy one part, timothy or prairie hay.
3. Corn seven parts, bran three parts, timothy one part, timothy or prairie hay.

STEER SHOULD BE DEHORND

Animals Fatten Faster and Sell Better—Work is Easier When Calves Are Young.

Steers usually fatten faster and sell better if dehorned. Calves can be dehorned any time after weaning, usually in the cool months when there are no flies. The work is easier when the calves are young; a harder job can be done; the shock is not so great and the calves are easier to handle. The aim should be to take the ring of skin off with the horn to prevent a stub growing out. A little pine tar over the wound helps to stop bleeding and keep away flies. Clippers do good work with all young cattle and are quicker and more humane than the saw. If the clippers are kept sharp they will handle any ordinary horn without crushing it, though it is not as easy to cut close to the head as with the saw.

HOUSE FOR FARROWING SOWS

Animals Should Be Separated and Given Ration High in Protein and Rather Laxative.

A sow which is soon to farrow should be separated from the other hogs at least a week before her date, and during this time she should be given a ration high in protein, and rather laxative in nature; in other words, a feed very similar to that which is given while suckling the pigs, and as the farrowing time approaches the ration should be reduced somewhat. This will bring the sow up to farrowing time in good condition, and she will not be feverish and restless; hence, less danger of her injuring or killing her pigs when she farrows.

HOGS IN LIMITED QUARTERS

Success May Be Had If Quarters Are Kept Clean—Divide Pasture Into Desired Areas.

Swine can be raised when they are confined in limited quarters if the quarters are kept clean, but they will do much better and stay in better health if they have plenty of pasture. Dividing the pasture into convenient areas, so that the hogs can be shifted from one pasture by plowing and reseeded.

Railroads Did Not Alter Love

By LILY WANDEL

(Copyright, 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

When Ross Lane came to Greenwood, in the extreme north of the state, to look after his "interests" it was most natural that he made his headquarters in the bachelor abode of Bob Meyers, an old college friend.

"Great luck for you, Ross," cried Bob, striding restlessly up and down the living room and office combination of his wee cottage. "I'd give half my life to have had such good fortune! Not for myself—I don't give a hang for money myself, but for Melba."

Ross, who was smiling snugly at the fire, ignored the last part of the speech. "Bob, I never really gave that old tract of land a thought—fields full of tree stumps a nice inheritance, and now the railroad going to come up here! Bob, I feel like a millionaire! A man down in the city offices tipped me off, or I'd never have been on to it at all. These railroad officials will be up here in a week or two. And, do you know, Bob, a dozen persons seem to be on to it, for I have had as many offers for that land!"

Bob stood still, deep in thought, his eyes glued on the roaring logs. Then he turned gravely to Ross. "Look here, I want to tell you something. There's a girl here in this town—the loveliest woman I have ever seen. I love her, Ross, but I haven't a ghost of a chance. Her name is Melba Waring, and she has told me quite frankly that she is inclined to be mercenary about marriage—she'll only marry a man with money!"

"Contemptible!" shrugged the other, lighting a cigarette.

"Maybe, but meet her and then judge. You have a better chance to win her than any other man in town. Fact is, Ross, everybody knows what you have come up here for. You're a fine-looking fellow and with this heavy money background you're just the man for Melba!"

"You—You—She's Marrying You for Your Money, That's All!"

"Bob, old chap, I feel sorry for you; I'm not in the market for a wife, but if you wish I'll teach this young lady a lesson!"

Bob smiled faintly. "Go ahead—but I know you'll fall for her. They all do!"

"Up here, perhaps, in this Godforsaken little town, but remember I've been practically all over the world."

"I know it," answered Bob, gloomily. "They always fall the hardest."

Ross was not exactly prepared for Melba; he had fancied her entirely different, a bit haughty or a trifle bold, but here was a girl with grave blue eyes who reminded him of a Botticelli Madonna. He tried to tell himself that this was a pose she affected, but after half a dozen meetings he was forced to admit that she was perfectly natural.

In a small town cut off from the world it is comparatively easy to make friendships and see a great deal of one another in a few weeks. Ross hoped that it would be a long time before these railroad officials came to Greenwood to buy his land. He liked to walk to the old Waring home on the edge of the town where Melba lived with an aged aunt and uncle, and wander with the young girl through the pine woods. It was difficult to remember, then, that his object was to teach her a lesson.

He told her quite frankly about his prospects and her eyes grew bright and eager. Then one day he told her that he loved her and asked her to marry him—this was part of the lesson.

"I've heard the news," cried Bob the next evening with feverish eyes and pale cheeks. "Melba has accepted you—didn't I tell you? It's a darn shame, just when I'm about to close a deal that would mean a golden future for this town and myself. Think of it, Ross, if I could get a paper mill here! It's ideal—all this uncut wood—plenty of water! My luck again! But look here, you—you—she's marrying you for your money, that's all!" he fairly snarled the words at Ross.

"Bob," he said thickly, "I'm only teaching her a lesson, you know!"

"I know better," roared his friend,

"You're head over heels in love with her and you won't teach her any other lesson except to marry you!"

Ross fought with himself all through the night and by dawn he admitted that he loved her. Mercenary or not, she was the girl he wanted for a wife.

After a few hours' sound sleep Ross awoke filled with real happiness. It was his intention to walk out to the Waring home at once, but the news reached him at breakfast that the long-looked-for railroad officials had arrived at last. Ross hurried through breakfast and went to see them with a confident, expectant heart.

An hour later he was up at the Waring home.

"Ross, what's happened?" Melba's blue eyes grew dark with concern. "Let's go for a walk," he abruptly; "there's something I want to ask you." She trotted off obediently with him. "Melba, is it true that you want to marry money—that—" the words choked him—"you wouldn't consider a poor man?"

She was silent a moment, and when she spoke her voice was low and troubled. "It is true! Ross, how can I tell you? I've lived in an atmosphere of poverty all my life—it fairly stifles me! My mother might have lived if there had been money for specialties—money for comforts and a trip to the city. I grow cold and hard when I think of it. Ross, I grow firm with resolve when I think how my brother was thwarted of education and opportunity. My children will have those things which money alone can buy! Oh, Ross, can you understand? It isn't just selfishness; it's the natural result of living handicapped by poverty!"

He drew her gently to him and kissed her. "Melba, I understand; you do love me! I can feel that. But you never would have permitted yourself to fall in love with me if there had not been this big railroad deal in the background. Isn't that the truth?" His grasp tightened on her fingers. "Melba, the officials have arrived; I've spoken to them. They have no intention of buying my acres of tree stumps! He felt her fingers grow icy cold, and he continued monotonously: "It's only fair that I tell you. Bob has got some capital interested in locating a pulp and paper mill here, and there's somebody with pull connected with the deal who has influenced the railroad to enter the town from the other end. Bob's going to boom this town, Melba; he's on a fair way to be a wealthy man!"

They walked along for a long time in complete silence; then she turned to him with a smile. "Ross, do you think for one moment that I can give you up? Love is the strongest of all desires!"

He looked at her with real agony in his eyes. "It would not be fair. I would be taking advantage of your emotions and pity. There's Bob—"

"Ross, what matters money or railroad when we love each other? Father and mother were poverty-stricken, but they were happy together. We are young, with courage and stout hearts!" and her blue eyes lighted so brightly and her lips pursed so temptingly that Ross gave himself up to happiness.

When he strode back to Bob's cottage the owner thereof met him excitedly. "Look here, Ross—" and then stopped dumbfounded. "What in the dickens are you looking so ridiculously happy about? Because you just lost thousands of dollars? The whole town is sorry for you, Ross, but I can't say that I am. Ross," and his voice quivered with eagerness, "the railroad officials are going out to see Melba this afternoon to negotiate with her for all that bad timber land, she owns in the rear of her place. The railroad is coming through that way on account of this paper mill project. That's not the point. Melba will make a nice little sum out of it and that makes her independent to choose—understand—choose the man she really wants!"

"Bob," answered Ross quietly, "I'm sorry for you, but Melba has made her choice."

Home and Restaurant.

Life in the big city is confusing. It must be doubly confusing to youngsters of three or four, remarks the New York Sun. One of these youngsters was observed the other night in a Brooklyn restaurant; a girl of possibly five years, she was having dinner with her father. She had acquired herself with credit through every course of the table d'hôte dinner. Her undoing did not come until the very end.

Then, when her father was holding her coat for her, she delayed putting her stubby arms in the sleeves. Looking up for the reason for her delay, he saw that she was painstakingly trying to fold her napkin. Smiling, he took it out of her hands and tossed it on the table, still unfolded.

She put her coat on, but a perplexed look lingered on her face. Probably she was wondering what was the sense of learning to do things at home that you didn't do when you went away from home.

Origin of Polka-Dot.

To the polka-dot is ascribed an old ancestry. Its name, of course, is derived from the polka, an old-fashioned round dance with three steps to the measure.

This dance, introduced in Europe by a Bohemian around about 1835, spread to the United States at the time that Polk was a candidate for the presidency.

The polka-dot was bracketed with Polk's name by political admirers, and polka-dots and polka-dots, from shirt to shoes, became a bit of future in merchants' windows.

MESSAGE FROM THE ROMANS

French Soldiers Found That Conquering Legions Had Preceded Them Through Pass in Algeria.

The overseas veteran may well glory in his achievements. That is one of the rewards of valor. It is usually for lack, not of generosity, but of perspective. The vaunting doughboy should ponder the story of the French soldiers who during the early days of the French occupation of Algeria worked their way through a pass that until then was thought to be inaccessible. They were, says Mr. M. W. Hilton-Simpson in "Among the Hill Folk of Algeria," naturally proud of what they had done and asked the commanding officer to allow them to carve the names of their regiments and the date on some suitable rock.

He readily assented, and they began to search. Almost at once they found a boulder that seemed to be ideally placed for their purpose; moreover, one side of it was flat. The soldiers began to clean it preparatory to immortalizing their exploit. But on closer examination they found that the rock was not so smooth as they thought. In fact, there appeared to be lettering on it.

Imagine their amazement when one of them who was accustomed to decipher inscriptions announced that the rock already bore the name of a unit of a great disciplined army—an army the tradition of which had been as glorious as their own. For the timeless letters informed the Frenchmen not only that the pass had been traversed, but that a road had been built through it by the Sixth legion of the Roman army during the reign of Antoninus Plus more than 18 centuries before—Youth's Companion.

RELICS IN NATIONAL PARK

Sacramental Towers Built by People Probably Contemporary With the Cliff Dwellers.

The new national park recently set aside by President Harding will have an unusual interest for tourists in that within its confines there are numerous relics of a prehistoric race who probably were contemporary with the cliff dwellers. These consist of ruins of towers, believed by experts to have been used by the ancient people in their religious ceremonies.

The new park lies largely in Montezuma county in Colorado, about 30 miles west of Cortez, extending into southwestern Utah. Most of the towers are in Colorado. They are little known outside Montezuma county, and are seldom visited by tourists, as they are 50 miles off the beaten path of travel. They differ from similar ruins at Mesa Verde, which were built on uplands, and, or were, mainly used as watch towers or for astronomical purposes while some of the Montezuma towers are found in canyons.

Sugar From Sap of Palms

Various tropical palms yield a sugary sap which is employed by the natives for making sugar and "toddy." A summary of information relating specially to the Nipa palm from this point of view is given in the Bulletin of the Imperial Institute. This palm grows in the muddy estuaries of rivers throughout the eastern tropics. The juice, which contains about 15 per cent of sugar, is obtained by removing the flowering shoots and collecting the sap which escapes. If desired, the juice can be fermented for the production of alcohol.

It has been estimated that 28 hundredweight of sugar, or 200 gallons of 96 per cent alcohol, could be obtained annually from an acre of swamp land planted with Nipa palms. The tree occurs over extensive areas in British North Borneo, and the authorities there are considering the question of utilizing it as a source of sugar and alcohol.

Wit and Beauty.

The late Guy Barham, who was a leading figure in the public life of Los Angeles, had a well-merited reputation for wit.

At a dinner party one evening Mr. Barham sat beside a lady whose neck and shoulders were very beautiful. Proud of their beauty, the lady always wore outrageously décolleté gowns, but she would modify or veil this décolletage by means of a spray of orchids which, however, had more than once been known to fall out of place.

And now, between the soup and the fish, the orchids, as their habit was, dropped to the floor. Mr. Barham picked them up and restored them to the beautiful lady.

"Your fig leaf, madam," he said.

High Prices.

Edgar Selwyn, the New York impresario, was talking on the Olympic about the swimming pools that are a feature of the newest and most luxurious liners.

"For those swimming pools and open-air restaurants and so forth," he said, "we passengers pay high enough, goodness knows."

"To tell the truth, I am rather in sympathy with the plump, dark lady who stood on the marble brink of a liner's swimming pool the other day and screamed angrily at her dark, plump daughter:

"Confound dot girl, she never learns nodding! Minna, Minna, swim into der deep water, and get der tort' of your money!"

MEETING A CHINESE EMPRESS

According to Woman, It Was an Exciting Incident, for Which Dress Rehearsal Was Held.

"There are few more arresting figures in recent history," writes Lady Susan Townley in her autobiography, "Indiscretions of Lady Susan," recently published, "than was Tsu Hsi An, the late empress dowager of China, who, entering the imperial palace as a concubine of a former emperor because the despotic ruler of a great empire. It may be imagined, then, how thrilled I was when the time came to penetrate the veil which shrouded from ordinary mortals the mysteries of the Chinese court. Before the approach of the great day Mrs. Conger, wife of the American minister, called together in her capacity of 'doyenne' all the ladies of the corps diplomatique who were privileged to attend the imperial audience and put us through a sort of dress rehearsal of the ceremonial to be pursued. She was a funny old lady . . . and great was her excitement at the prospect of the morrow. She bade us all curtsy to her Chinese majesty, and strongly recommended that we should all wear white embroidered underpetticoats, so that, in the event of our tripping over our feet in the performance of these curtsies, no undue display of stockings leg should offend the sensibilities of the surrounding Chinese dignitaries!"

ODD "CURES" FOR DISEASE

Remarkable Indeed Have Been Some of the Nostrums Prescribed for the Ills of Humanity.

The heads of venomous serpents have held an important place in medicine. A strong broth made from them and mixed with salt and spices, and one hundred other remedies was employed under the name of theriac as a cure for every conceivable disease.

Curious survivals of this old belief in the efficacy of certain reptiles and insects as cures for human ills occasionally come to light, even in this advanced age. In New England, cobweb pills are supposed to be good for the ague, and in the south a certain knuckle bone in the pig's foot is a cure for rheumatism. If it be carried in the pocket or worn suspended from a string around the neck.

The spider web pill originated in China, where all species of insects have certain positive or negative values in medicine.

SOME HUNT

Visitor: Sonny is your pop home? Small One: No sir. He's gone hunting.

Visitor: Um-m-m-m, did he take his gun or jug?

Dick Knew.

Bishop Joseph M. Francis, who began his long service to the Episcopal church as a choir boy, takes quite an interest in the boy choir of the Church of the Advent, at Thirty-third and Meridian streets. On a recent Sunday he was talking to them and propounded this question:

"Boys, do you know what they would do with a soldier who failed to come to attention when his superior officer spoke to him?"

There was an impressive silence for about a half-minute, then Dick Rathenford, age ten, piped out:

"Put him in the dumpphouse squad!"

Turkey Gobbler Some Scrapper.

A battle royal between a great turkey gobbler and a man occurred when Thomas Burke, Jr., of the Baldon road, near Dover, Ont., attempted to kill one of his flock. The fowl's cries attracted the gobbler, which flew to the rescue. Mr. Burke suffered so severely that a surgeon was called to dress his wounds. The big bird's claws penetrated one of Mr. Burke's eyes, and he may lose the sight of it. The hen escaped.

Pugnacious Bear.

A party of football fans in an automobile returning from a game in Ladysmith, B. C., ran into a bear ambling along the middle of the road. The animal faced the glare of the headlights and charged at the car, driving his head against the bumper. The bear regained his senses, almost immediately and rushed into the woods, leaving behind a badly dented car and some of his hide.

Accident Hard to Account For.

The driver of an ice wagon in Bucyrus, Ohio, while walking about the barn on level ground, without tripping, placed his foot in such a position as to fracture the ankle bone.

Thackeray.

He blew on his pipe, and words came tripping round him like children, like pretty little children who are perfectly drilled for the dance; or came, did he will it, tripping in their procedure, like kings, gloomily—: Bear-bom.

Ice Is Solid But Care Must Be Used
At Rhinecliff Shore Where Tide
Forces Water Up Through Cracks.

The farm spell which struck this city Thursday was very welcome to most of the residents but it also gave rise to many anxious inquiries upon the part of people who find it necessary to cross the ice to connect with New York Central trains. The taxi-men are still maintaining regular service between the ferry shed and the Rhinecliff side and as yet have experienced no difficulty in making the trip. The only danger which confronts the automobiles is on the Rhinecliff side near the dock where the tide conditions have loosened up the ice. When the tide comes in the water flows over the ice, which is in reality safe, for quite a distance making it seem unsafe. One or two horses and trucks have gotten a little too near the shore at Rhinecliff and as a result have taken a bath. However no serious accidents have taken place as yet. One horse backed the wagon which he was pulling too near the shore Thursday and as a result the rear wheels went in. The horse, however, put up a game struggle and pulled the wagon out.

The ferry transport is undergoing repairs at her dock on this side of the river. The engine has been thoroughly overhauled and the boat redecorated throughout. It is expected that the boat will resume running some time next week.

IT WAS AN AIR HOLE
SAYS HOWARD KELDER

184 Tremper Avenue, Kingston, N. Y.
March 2, 1923.

Editor, The Freeman:
May I have a small space in your paper to explain my "heroism" which was referred to in last evening's Freeman?

In the first place I did not put the article in The Freeman which appeared Wednesday evening and the act which I did was not to show my heroism but to help the lady, which any gentleman would do under the circumstances; also wish to state that it was an air hole into which the lady stepped and not three inches of water.

Trusting this will explain the matter fully, and thanking you, I am

HOWARD KELDER.

Large Family Records.

Although 24 children in a family is not altogether an uncommon thing in the Province of Quebec, the birth of a twenty-fourth child to the same parents in Geneva was found to be of sufficient importance to telegraph the news to England. This has caused a London paper to remark that there has been larger families in England than that of the Swiss, and the writer proceeds to say that a county history of Cumberland relates that at Kirtle-Moor, in 1787, "a man and his wife accompanied by their 30 children night have been seen proceeding to church to the christening of their thirty-first."

REFORMED CHURCH
WOMEN MEET

Missionary Work of Classes of Ulster Discussed—Address by The Rev.
Mr. Boeve.

The first of a series of group meetings of the Women's Missionary Union of the Classes of Ulster met on Thursday afternoon at the Reformed Church of the Comforter at 3 o'clock. There was a large attendance.

Mrs. Barnum of the Church of the Comforter presided and Mrs. Leroy acted as accompanist for the congregational singing. The opening hymn was followed by the reading of the tenth chapter of St. Luke as the scripture lesson. The Rev. W. F. Stowe, pastor of the church, offered prayer after which a second hymn was sung.

Mrs. Weed, president of the Classical Union was the first speaker and said that as this was the first of the group meetings she would like to explain just what these auxiliary group meetings were to be. During all the five years that she had been connected with the women's branch of the Classes of Kingston, no way had ever been devised to reach the nearby yet outlying districts. With the union of the Women of the Classes of Ulster and Kingston, the executive board of the Union and Mrs. Weed, after considerable conferring had devised this plan of auxiliary group meetings. Their object would be the getting closer together of the women of the entire Union; the knowing each other better; the learning of the aims and desires of each church as to its missionary work. It was hoped in this way to help and strengthen and encourage the weaker and smaller auxiliaries. The missionary auxiliaries are dear to the women of every community, but especially to those of the remote or small communities where often the only work that the women can do for Christ is to show their ardour and love. Through the group meetings it was hoped to show these women what they really could do. In every community there are shut-ins and it was further hoped that through these meetings, ways and means would be devised to tell them of the work for Christ's kingdom going on in the outside world, and also to let them know that their ardent prayers and interest could be very helpful. Mrs. Weed asked that prayer leagues be formed by the various auxiliaries with committees to visit the shut-ins, giving them subjects for prayer at the same time telling them what the churches are doing.

Mrs. Weed said that in the spring the Women's Classical Union would hold a convention and asked that all auxiliaries hold elections, choosing their officers for two years, and reporting the same to the convention. It is planned to have a Missionary Union Directory that will contain not only the names of the members but their addresses and telephone numbers.

In the matter of giving, Mrs. Weed urged that there be proportionate giving rather than undue enthusiasm over the first enthusiastic orator who might address them, giving too largely then and having to skimp in later gifts. While on the subject of giving, the Rev. Mr. Stowe asked about a special assessment of $20 levied on the Church of the Comforter as to what it was for. This brought the following facts to light. The older classical union had been contributing to a Kentucky Mountain Home and to a specific Indian missionary endeavor. When the two classes were united it was felt that the work should go on, so the $200, $100 of each going to each activity was apportioned as fairly possible.

At the above mentioned spring conference each auxiliary was asked to be prepared to tell of its specific work and each group would be asked to tell of its activities. One other thing Mrs. Weed asked and that was that each woman in each group ask some friend to come with her to the group meetings, thus widening the influence of Christ's teachings.

It was stated that the group officers had been appointed by the executive board and had proven themselves to be most excellent in their several capacities. Miss Dickinson had been appointed vice president, and Miss Luther of Port Ewen, secretary.

As Mrs. Barnum called the roll each of the churches represented gave brief sketches of the work of their own organizations. That of the First Reformed Church, numbering some hundred women had a sewing guild; packed three barrels of clothing, one for the Kentucky Mountain Home, one for a Montana mission and one for the Oklahoma Indians. They had several active committees and also gave to the Women's Christian Colleges of the Orient. The Fair Street Reformed Church besides distributing funds to the general board holds an annual quilting party when a thank offering is taken up. Both of these churches, and the Church of the Comforter will hold their Lenten prayer meetings, the first to be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at The Huntington. The Fair Street Reformed Church organization has several active committees a sewing guild, etc.

The Port Ewen Reformed Church organization distributed its money as the other two societies and this year is doing sewing work where formerly it did study work. The Bloomington Society made its contributions as did the others, sending a missionary box to Kentucky and a small sum of money to Arabia.

The St. Remy women had done their share financially, had sent cards to India, clothing to Central Europe and are now making a quilt for the Home for the Aged.

The Church of the Comforter had several working committees, and its slogan is "Every Woman in the Church in the Missionary Society."

After the reports Mrs. Dougherty, accompanied at the organ by Mrs. Leroy sang very acceptably "There is an Hour of Hallowed Peace."

The Rev. Mr. Boeve, pastor of the First Reformed Dutch Church, was then asked to address the meeting which he did most interestingly.

Mr. Boeve said that as he had himself considerable experience of the domestic mission board he would give his hearers a sketch of the same. Mr. Boeve then told most interestingly of his boyhood days spent in one of the Dutch colonies out in the central west. Then he further described the founding of other colonies where the people were practically all Dutch and intensely loyal and devoted to the one church, to them, the Reformed Dutch Church. The growth and development of these colonies, and also the story of Hope College, the "poor man's college," was graphically told as was a description of the old churches, later replaced by more pretentious edifices, through the assistance of the domestic missionary board. The single-heartedness, the loyalty, the pioneer spirit of these Dutch people were all noted, as was also their narrow-mindedness, now giving place to a broader vision and therefore greater usefulness in the Kingdom of God. But through narrow and perhaps bigoted in some ways, Mr. Boeve said that in the sections of country he had described there were no decadent churches such as were found in pitiful numbers in the east.

Mr. Boeve's exceedingly informing talk was followed by a recital of the Lord's Prayer after which the ladies of the Church of the Comforter invited all present to remain for light refreshments and a brief social get-together time.

Costa Rica.

Costa Rica is one of the small republics of Central America which threw off Spanish sovereignty in 1821. Since then it has been an independent state ruled at times by dictators and at times having a constitution and a republican form of government, which is its present condition. The area is estimated at 23,000 square miles, which is a little more than the area of Nova Scotia.

Beware of Too Much Sugar.

Sugar is a salt. Every salt is delectable. Sugar is the most delectating of all salts; it sucks up the liquids from the blood through the veins; thence comes the coagulation, then the solidification of the blood; thence the tubercles in the lungs; thence death. And this is why diabetes borders on consumption.—Tholomeus in Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables."

Informal.

At a school in the mill district of a certain manufacturing town in the East a teacher received first-hand impression of how the other half of the world lives. A little Russian was painfully progressing through his reading lesson till he was finally stumped on the word "plate." To help him the schoolmate kindly inquired, "What is it mother brings in the bread on?" The little chap's eyes lit up with the light of understanding. "The newspaper," he said.

Alarm Bell for Boiling Milk.

The "lactabell" is a device that rings an alarm when the milk is boiling. The instrument comprises an ordinary bell gong fitted at the top of a tube containing a fusible composition that melts at a temperature equal to the scalding point of milk, or about 154 degrees Fahrenheit. The tube is placed in a saucapane containing cold milk, being hung on the inside of the rim by means of a pair of hooks and the saucapane is then placed on the fire. As soon as the milk reaches scalding point the fusible composition softens and allows a ratchet wheel to move. A strong spring then draws the striker, causing it to strike the gong sharply and warn the housewife to remove the saucapane.

Hypnotizing Animals.

In India it is known that a cobra caught by the neck and gently pressed will soon become stiff and remain so for a considerable time, either coiled up or out straight. A frog fastened to a board and turned suddenly upside down, goes into a trance. Other animals are susceptible to this treatment, some more quickly than others. If you pick up a crab and wave it in the air it becomes immobile, a female bending her legs over her abdomen, a male sticking them out almost straight. The same is true of the fresh-water crayfish, only this resists for a much longer time than the crab.

Theocracy.

He blew on his pipe, and words came tripping round him like children, like pretty little children who are perfectly drilled for the dance; or came, did he will it, tripping in their procession, like kings, gloomily.—Max Beerbohm.

GENARO WINS; VERDICT DISPUTED

By Davis J. Walsh.

New York, March 2.—"One a minute," says Henry Ford, speaking in terms of tin economies. "One a minute," echoes the judges of the prize fights at Madison Square Garden as they make and unmake champions.

They unfrocked another titleholder last night when Frankie Genaro was given the decision over Pancho Villa after fifteen fast rounds and the verdict, which carried with it the American flyweight championship and the privilege of waiting a few at Jimmy Wilde for a suitable percentage of the house, was only semi-popular. In fact, it created as much of a furor as the decision rendered less than a week before, whereby Gene Tunney was declared the winner over Harry Greb in a bout for the light heavyweight title.

The gentlemen of the press were divided into two camps.

ALBANY IN FIELD FOR HONORS

The Albany team in the New York State Basketball League was scheduled to play Schenectady at the latter's court Saturday night but Manager Hepinstall has postponed the game, due to the inability of rounding up his players. The Senators will play their first home game in two weeks on Wednesday evening, when Amsterdam is scheduled to play.

The Albany Knickerbocker-Press says that Albany is figuring on beating out Kingston for the second half honors and has added new players to its line-up. Bill Hepinstall has forwarded a letter to Commissioner Chandler asking him to make an early decision on the protested Albany-Cohoes game on January 27.

On Monday evening of next week Cohoes comes here to oppose the Morgenweck clan. If the local representatives beat the Cohoes team the Albany team or any team in the league will have to go at some speed to beat out the locals.

REFUSE TO REVEAL NAMES

Odd Superstition That Prevails Among Certain Indian Tribes of American Indians.

Writing of taboos words in "The Golden Bough," Sir J. G. Frazer says: "The Indians of Chiloee keep their names secret and do not like to have them uttered aloud; for they say that there are fairies or imps on the mainland or neighboring islands who, if they knew folks' names, would do them an injury; but so long as they do not know the names these mischievous sprites are powerless."

"The Araucanians will hardly ever tell a stranger their names, because they fear that he would thereby acquire some supernatural power over themselves. Asked his name by a stranger who is ignorant of their superstitions, an Araucanian will answer, 'I have none.'"

"When an Ojibway is asked his name he will look at some bystander and ask him to answer."

"Sure! Even the apaches of the rogues' gallery know the evil omen of the real name. Hence the origin and would-be magic of the 'alias.'"

To Stop Bleeding From Nose.

When we remember that not very long ago venesection, or bleeding by the physician, was a favorite method of treatment and that leeches were used for local bleeding, we can the more readily understand that a simple attack of nosebleed is nothing to be afraid of. At the same time, however, it may be well to commit to memory a few simple precautions. The patient should always sit upright and should hold the chin down to enable the blood to flow forward through the nose and not backward into the throat. Tight collars and bands round the neck should be loosened, and cold should be applied to the wrists or to the back of the neck. It often helps to snuff cold water up the nose. If the bleeding comes from a small spot inside the nose, the spot should be treated with an astringent or with nitrate of silver.—Youth's Companion.

Is Snake Charmed by Music?

There is no foundation in fact for the common belief that a snake can be "charmed" with music, according to Allen S. Williams, director of the Republic Study Society of America. Mr. Williams bases his opinion on a series of experiments extending over a period of nearly twenty-five years.

"I have tried every sort of music," says Mr. Williams, as quoted in the Scientific American, "from a tin whistle with note holes in it to a symphony orchestra, and have used as subjects nearly every variety of snakes, but have yet to note any response on the part of the reptile."

Not All Americans.

"Guess," as used by the Yankee, is always chosen by the English as a typical Americanism, when, in fact, it was used by Shakespeare and Chaucer. "Allow" was formerly used in England in the same sense as in America. Special Americans are "sun-up," "sun-down," "completed," "as ever," "haying," "right off," or "right away," "shindig," a dance or party, usually a noisy, rough one; "shindig," a fight or row; "bark up the wrong tree," "little end of the horn," "het up," "kibosh."

Cheerful Wish.

"I've often wondered why they shave a man's head before they put him in the electric chair," said the pessimist, gloomily.

"Oh, I hope you'll find out some day," said the listener, politely.

The pessimist was satisfied.

Miss Phayre—But I don't know you, sir.

Stranger—Not yet, but I have asked Mr. Bangs to introduce me.

MEN IN PREHISTORIC TIMES

No Proof That There Was Gradual Rise From Savagery to Practice of Human Virtues.

It is proved that men—true men—existed on this earth many thousands years ago. How many no one can certainly say, but certainly longer than the period accepted as a strict dogma by Bible Christians within living memory (and still affirmed by some of them). It is not proved, but it is highly probable that there is genetic connection between man as we know him and the earlier inferior types of which evidence remains.

If a critic were to maintain that man as we know him rose suddenly from some other type not yet found (for the evidence is very fragmentary and slight), he would not be contradicting ascertained fact; on the contrary, he has on his side the anomaly of fine skulls found in apparently very early strata; all that department is quite unified.

That man as we know him was a wild thing for countless generations and gradually—very gradually—rose to practice the human virtues and intelligence is not proved at all. Even the vague analogy from existing savages fails. Some savages are of one character, some of another; all as old in descent as ourselves. The excessive evil affirmed of true man when first he could be so called is sheer unsupported affirmation proceeding not from evidence—for we have none—but from a mood, a desire that things should be so.—Yale Review.

Value of Books.

No book is worth anything which is not worth much; nor is it serviceable until it has been read and re-read, and loved and loved again; and marked, so that you can refer to the passages you want in it. As a soldier can seize the weapon he needs in an armory, or a housewife bring the spice she needs from her store. Bread of flour is good; but there is bread, sweet as honey, if we would eat it, in a good book; and the faculty must be poor indeed which, once in their lives, cannot, for such multiplicable barley-loaves pay their baker's bill.—Ruskin.

And the Teacher, Almost. Willie had a new puppy, and a great opportunity to get home early seemed to present itself when his teacher announced that as soon as the language pupils could hand in their papers showing how they had used the list of words she would write upon the board they might be dismissed. In a remarkably short time Willie was on his way rejoicing and his surprised teacher was reading: "The camel, leopard, elephant, tiger, acrobat lady, scar, teacher, zebra, parrot, soldier, sailor, king and queen all died."
